25 KNOWN GANG MEMBERS ARRESTED AFTER ATTEMPT TO ROB WATER TOWER BANK

ODOR OF WHISKY CAUSES SEIZURE OF SAMPLE CASE

Trunk at Statter Contained Six Jugs, but Four Were Broken.

A trunk containing six two-gallon jugs, four of which had become broken in transit, allowing whisky to leak out, was seized at Hotel Statter this morning by prohibition enforcement officers.

Persons who had smelled the odor of the whisky, which had saturated the trunk, reported it to the Federal authorities and caused the seizure.

The trunk was consigned to W. W. Hayne of York, Pa., who has not as yet arrived at the hotel. The whisky in the two broken jugs will be held as evidence upon which a charge of violating constitutional prohibition will be placed against Hayne upon his arrival. The trunk bore labels indicating it to be a cigar sample case.

FIST FIGHT IN COURTHOUSE AT CLAYTON; INKWELLS THROWN

Draftsman for Highway Engineer Takes Up Father's Cause With Assistant Prosecutor.

A fist fight occurred today at 3:30 p. m. in the courthouse at Clayton between Floyd W. Brooks, 50 years old, Second Assistant Prosecuting Attorney, and William Berry, 26, draftsman in the office of the Highway Engineer, who served two years in France as a Captain in motor transport.

It started in a corridor, progressed to the office of the Prosecuting Attorney, where inkwells, nudage pots and papers flew to and fro, and ended with Brooks reclining over a radiator, and Berry pummeling him.

Judge McElhinney shouted: "This thing must go on in the courthouse," and called for help. Three Deputy Sheriffs separated the fighters.

Judge McElhinney first ordered the arrest, but upon explanation of the cause by William Eltring, highway engineer, said that nothing would be done. Eltring told him that Brooks and Berry's father, the Rev. C. C. Berry, 66 years old, of Valley Park, had an argument on their way to Clayton this morning, and the preacher called Brooks a "skunk," whereupon Brooks struck Berry.

Berry told his son, and the fight followed.

NEURO PREACHERS INDORSE WOOD AT ALL-NIGHT MEETING

Resolution Passed at 4 A. M. After Vehement Discussion.

Over General.

A political conference Tuesday night of 63 negro preachers, professional and business men, which began at 8 p. m. in the "American Cabin," 614 North Compton avenue, adjourned for breakfast at 8 a. m. yesterday morning.

One of the participants said that at 1 a. m. the discussion became so vehement that it was necessary to "clamp the windows." The discussion, which caused the chairman, S. Douglas Herd, to threaten to quit, centered in a resolution endorsing the candidacy of Gen. Leonard Wood for President. The resolution was passed at 4 a. m. and the indorsement then was made unanimous. During the discussion Gen. Wood was referred to as "the incarnation of Washington, Lincoln and Roosevelt."

Senator Spencer's record was indorsed but a resolution commending the candidacy of Representative Dyer failed.

A State convention was called to meet in Sedalia March 6 and 7. This convention will write a "creed" and indorse what candidates it deems worthy.

PHILIPPINES OFFICIAL HURT

Vice Governor-General Yeater and Missionary Friend in Auto Accident.

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, Philippine Islands, Jan. 22.—Vice Governor-General Charles E. Yeater of the Philippines was slightly injured and a friend named Bothwell of Missouri was painfully hurt, when an axle on the automobile in which they were riding broke, swerving the machine against a tree. Bothwell was removed to a military hospital.

The Bothwell mentioned in the Manila dispatch is without doubt John H. Bothwell of Sedalia, president of the West St. Louis Water and Light Co. He has been a prominent Republican politician for many years and is visiting Yeater, who is his friend. Yeater formerly was a student of Sedalia, Mo.

Police Still Without Definite Line on Identity of Men Whose Lookout Was Slain by Policeman.

CASHIER DESCRIBES RAID AT INQUEST

Says One of Gang Stuffed $50,000 in Securities Into Sack—Verdict Is Justifiable Homicide.

With 25 known gang members from various parts of the city under arrest as suspects, the police today still had no definite line on the identity of the men whose attempt to rob the Water Tower Bank, 2100 East Grand avenue, at 9:50 a. m. yesterday, was thwarted by Probationary Patrolman Harry J. Shea of 2323 Hebert street, who shot and killed Walter Fischer, a paroled convict, who was acting as lookout for the robbers.

At the inquest over Fischer today a Coroner's jury decided that his killing was justifiable homicide and that Shea shot him in performance of his duty. Shea, who was taken to his home, is now at St. John's hospital. Though his condition is not serious, it was impossible for him to attend the inquest.

$51,000 Might Have Been Taken.

At the bank today it was said that a checking of the cash and securities showed it would have been possible for the robbers to have stolen $7400 in cash and $21,000 in Liberty Bonds if they had not been frightened away. There was $30,000 in cash in the locked portion of the safe to which the robbers did not have access. They had put $2500 in currency in a gunny sack which they carried with them, and were making preparations to fill another.

Bonds and money were kept. The accessible money in this vault amounted to $5000.

Henry Steinhoff of 2101 Bissell street, brother-in-law of Shea, testified at the inquest that the same men got out of an automobile and go toward the bank entrance. They wore raincoats and caps and had handkerchiefs around their necks. Steinhoff at this time was on the porch of his home just back of the bank building. About two minutes later, he said, he heard shooting and his wife exclaimed: "They must have shot my brother."

Steinhoff said he ran to the street with a revolver in his hand and exchanged shots with the robbers as they drove away in the automobile. Then he went to the bank and found Shea wounded. Shea, he said, told him the lookout had shot him and he had killed the lookout.

Testimony at Inquest.

Louis Wellenhorff, cashier of the bank, appeared at the Coroner's office shortly before noon to testify. He was accompanied by a policeman who carried a grip, which Wellenhorff said contained $50,000 of Liberty Bonds that officers of the bank had secured taken to the vault of the Federal Reserve Bank for safe keeping.

The cashier testified that he was on duty in the teller's cage, nearest the front door of the bank, when four men rushed in, carrying revolvers. "Throw up your hands or we'll kill you," the foremost robber ordered. Instead of complying, Wellenhorff said that he stooped below the counter in an effort to get a revolver that had been placed there for just such emergencies.

Covered by Robbers.

"My hand had just touched the revolver when I glanced up and saw the four men leaning over the counter pointing their revolvers at my head," Wellenhorff said. "I threw the revolver aside and shot up my hands. While I was talking one of the men ran around the partition separating the workroom from that part of the bank used by customers, picked up my revolver and held his own against me."

The other robbers then came behind the partition, one of them walking to my cage, where he began stuffing currency, coins and several Liberty bonds, valued at about $5000 in all, into a potato sack. The bonds had only been purchased a few minutes before from a customer.

$50,000 in Bonds in Sack.

"The two who went back to the vault, opened the lower compartment of the safe, which contained deeds of trust, Liberty Bonds and other securities. They stuffed the bonds, worth about $40,000, into a large sack which they had brought in with them. Then I heard them discuss the matter."

BOARD SAYS LAW FORBIDS INCREASE TO TEACHERS NOW

Statement Explains Why It Is Unable to Use Funds on Hand for Salaries Now or Borrow Money.

HOPES TO ADVANCE PAY IN AUTUMN

Declares That Unless Permanent Revenue Is Provided Part of Service Must Be Reduced.

The Board of Education, through its president, Jesse McDonald, today issued a statement giving in detail its reasons why it cannot borrow money to grant an immediate increase in salaries to teachers and why it cannot use any of its available funds for that purpose.

The board, as was pointed out by President McDonald yesterday, holds out the hope that it may be able to grant an increase effective next September at the opening of the 1920-1921 school year, although the increased school tax voted Nov. 11 last will not be available until January, 1921.

It is pointed out that the increased taxes were voted for a period of one year only and that, unless the State Constitution is amended so that legislation providing a permanent increase in rate of taxation can be enacted, the voters will have to be appealed to annually for a tax sufficient to maintain the schools at their present standard.

It is pointed out in the statement that the board, in addition to the $4,566,510 set aside annually for teachers' salaries, has since September, 1917, appropriated for the maintenance of the schools a sum of $1,000,000 for regular annual increases in the teachers' pay roll. The board states that four suggestions have been advanced as to how the maintenance of the schools at their present standard might be met. It sets forth the suggestions and answers each one in detail.

A copy of the statement was submitted to Lon G. Hocker, attorney, representing the Grade Teachers' Association and the High School Teachers' Association, for his consideration. He has made a study of it and will report to the teachers this afternoon at Central High School.

Board Explains Situation.

The Board of Education, in its statement, says:

"(1) That in anticipation of the increased tax to be collected in January, 1921, the board should 'now borrow money to meet the teachers' salary increase."

"(2) That it should sell some of the bonds belonging to its permanent fund and repay that fund out of the increased tax when collected."

"(3) That it should take from its bond fund the new needed money for the teachers and restore to that fund when the increased tax is collected."

"(4) That it should drop all its investments and abandon the summer schools and thus save from present expenses the means with which to give the teachers an immediate increase."

"Each of these should have consideration and some of the difficulties attending are, in their order:

"1. Unlike many managerial school bodies, the St. Louis School board cannot lawfully pledge its credit or its property for a loan of money, and, consequently, no bank can afford to advance it money, the repayment of which could not be guaranteed by the lender. The board cannot borrow money save it be especially authorized by the voters. The Constitution provides that no school district of the State shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner or for any purpose to an amount exceeding in any year the income and revenue provided for such year, without the assent of two-thirds of the voters thereof voting at an election to be held for that purpose."

May Use Only Income.

"2. The bonds owned by the board, with immaterial exception, were purchased with the proceeds of sales of school lands granted by the United States Government and the General Assembly of Missouri. The Missouri statutes provide that all such lands shall constitute the permanent school fund of such city, only the income of which shall be used for the support of such public schools in such city. Nothing herein contained shall affect the right of such School Board to dispose of such lands; provided that the proceeds be duly invested and only the income thereof be used for the support of the public schools."

"Under this controlling law, the board can neither lawfully pledge nor give title by sale of these bonds."

GOVERNOR TO ASK FOR GRAND JURY TO ACT ON GAMBLING

Will Write to County Judge and Intends for Attorney-General to Conduct Investigation of Campbell's.

DEMOCRATIC LEAGUE MADE COMPLAINT

Letters Also Received From Several County Officials in Reply to Governor's Inquiry.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 22.—Gov. Gardner announced today that he would write to Circuit Judge Wurdeman of St. Louis County, suggesting that he call a special grand jury to investigate charges of gambling in the county. In case such a grand jury is called, the Governor said he would direct Attorney-General McAllister to conduct the investigation.

The Governor's decision follows the inquiries which he made of St. Louis County officials, after having received from the Post-Dispatch a statement of the facts as to gambling at Campbell's Forest Home, in Richmond Heights. The Governor has now received answers from the Sheriff, Prosecuting Attorney and the two Circuit Judges to his first letters of inquiry.

The Governor also received a copy of a resolution passed by the Democratic League of St. Louis County, asking him to send a special representative to St. Louis County to handle the gambling situation.

"While there is no question when the Attorney-General is sent to any county, by the Governor's direction, he shall have the full powers of a prosecuting officer, in presenting matters to the grand jury and in handling cases in court."

Judge Wurdeman to Call Jury After Hearing on Governor's Complaint

Judge Wurdeman, when asked by a Post-Dispatch reporter what action he would take on Gov. Gardner's suggestion, said he would wait until hearing from the Governor before making any positive announcement. He added:

"If Gov. Gardner asks for it, a special grand jury will probably be called. I see no need of calling for a special investigation at this time. The Governor's decision except that, as representative of the Attorney-General's office to the county to assist in such an investigation."

"While there does not seem to be any necessity for a special grand jury at this time, it may appear in the near future, and if it does, I will call one."

The Prosecuting Attorney of this county can take care of any investigation. He is able and competent."

Prosecuting Attorney Ralph said he had no comment to make on the Governor's decision except that he would do his duty, and would endeavor to aid in every way possible in enforcing the law.

USE OF 5500-POUND HAMMER IN EAST ST. LOUIS FORBIDDEN

Family Near Steel Plant Contends Trip Hammer Used to Smash From Shelves in Home.

Operation of a 5500-pound trip hammer, by the Mid-West Forge and Steel Co., at its plant on North Twenty-second street, East St. Louis, is forbidden by an injunction issued in the Circuit Court at Belleville, where a petition for such an injunction had been pending since March, 1917.

The complainants were A. N. and May E. Huff, whose home is 400 feet from the steel plant. They declared that the falling of the heavy hammer at intervals of 40 seconds, loosened the plaster in their home, shook the dishes from the shelves, and affected their nerves. The company has smaller trip hammers, of which no complaint was made.

60,000 IN RUSH FOR MEAT

Many Faint and Are Trampled in Food Sale in Vienna.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Jan. 22.—Recent announcement that a limited supply of meat would be placed on sale at the Central Market, three ounces being allowed per person, caused great crowds to assemble there.

Forty thousand persons gained entrance to the market at 4 o'clock in the morning and 20,000 tried to get in. Many fainted and were trampled upon by the crowd, while pickpockets added to the confusion.

WIDOW OF SHONTS BEGINS $1,000,000 ALIENATION SUIT

Action Against Mrs. Thomas First Instance in New York of Widow Bringing Such Proceedings.

ALSO HIGHEST CLAIM OF KIND RECORDED

Woman, to Whom $160,000 Was Bequeathed by Railway Magnate, Declares Charges Are Preposterous.

By a Staff Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—An alienation suit, asking for $1,000,000 damages from Mrs. Amanda C. Thomas of New York, was filed yesterday in the County Clerk's office by Mrs. Milla D. Shonts, widow of Theodore P. Shonts. Oldest memories around the county court house agreed not only that this complaint named the highest damages ever sought here for alleged alienation of affection, but also it was the first instance where a widow had instituted such an action.

Former Supreme Court Justice Sheam counsel for Mrs. Thomas, who is residuary legatee under the will of Shonts, which Mrs. Shonts is trying to break, said:

"I will simply say that, if these preposterous charges are ever brought to trial, their utter falsity will be demonstrated. They constitute a cruel slander upon Mrs. Thomas, behind whom all of Mr. Shonts' friends are standing. The filing of this belated complaint (the Shonts' will was executed in 1912) is a matter of the nature of the action, was filed Dec. 4, and no legal step of any sort was taken during the lifetime of Mr. Shonts) is mere propaganda for supposed effect upon the pending matter of the Shonts' will."

Estimates of Shonts' Fortune.

A close friend of Mrs. Thomas said that she had nowhere near the amount asked for in the complaint, that practically her entire fortune consisted of the residuary estate of Shonts, amounting to about $160,000, and her interest in the Davis & Hanford Co., photographers. This concern is capitalized at $30,000, and Mrs. Thomas is said to own the great majority, if not all, of the stock.

George W. Files of counsel for Mrs. Shonts said evidence to support the contents of Mrs. Shonts' in the complaint would be adduced in detail at the proper time. From a source close to Shonts, it was learned that letters have been received by Mrs. Shonts from persons who do not know from various points in this country and from Central American cities that have been investigated by her lawyers.

Friends of Mrs. Shonts and of her daughters continue to assert that Shonts was worth several millions of dollars up to a short time before his death. This contention has been denied by who were close to the family of the Interborough, and De Lancey Nicol, one of the executors.

FOUR DEATHS AT CITY HOSPITAL FROM INFLUENZA

14 New Cases at Hospital With 80 Listed in Reports to Health Department—Boy Among Dead.

CITY TO BE READY IN EVENT OF EPIDEMIC

Graduate Nurses to Be Registered by Red Cross—Surgical Dressing Workers Also Called for.

Fourteen new cases of influenza and four deaths during the 24 hours ending at 8 a. m. were reported today at the city hospital, making the total number of cases at that institution 45. There were two pneumonia deaths there during the 24-hour period.

There were 80 new cases of influenza recorded on cards received by the Health Department this morning, bringing the number of cases of influenza since last Oct. 1 to 257. There have been 14 deaths in the city in that period. In the same period last year there were 32,264 cases and 2101 deaths.

Boy of 10 Among Dead.

Those succumbing to influenza at the city hospital were: Andrew Niel, 53 years old, 2218 Mullany street; Eugene P. Cody, 10, 1084 South Newstead avenue; Mrs. Harriet Stricker, 19, of 1812 1/2 Hickory street, and Mrs. Cora Ingram, 23, of 322 North Nineteenth street.

Of the new cases of influenza at the city hospital, 10 were men, three of whom came from the narcotic ward, two were women, one was a young boy and one a young girl.

"No Epidemic in St. Louis."

Preparedness measures to meet any prevalence of influenza that may develop in St. Louis were reported yesterday by the Red Cross after a conference of Dr. Borden S. Veeder, chairman of its Public Health Committee, with Health Commissioner Starkloff, at the conclusion of which Dr. Starkloff authorized the following statement:

"Although a number of new cases of influenza have been reported in St. Louis there is at present no epidemic nor is there any need for alarm on the part of the public. The cases that have so far developed are of the nature of a milder type than last year."

In order to take care of any emergency, should the epidemic appear, adequate plans have been prepared, and a corps of municipal visiting nurses, the Visiting Nurses Association, attached along the St. Louis and Red Cross nurses will be directed by Miss Grace Anderson, superintendent of municipal nurses.

Nurses to Register.

The Red Cross has issued a call requesting all graduate and practical nurses and women who have taken Red Cross nursing instruction to register at once at Red Cross headquarters in the Equitable building, Sixth and Locust streets. It is further requested that those who have received post cards reply at once.

In order to obtain a sufficient supply of masks, aprons and similar equipment—should the need for them arise—it is desired to have as many Red Cross women who worked in surgical dressing workshops during the war and who are willing to volunteer, register their names with Miss Grace Tausig, at Red Cross headquarters. Plans are being made to enlarge the present hospital facilities should the need arise."

Restrictions at Hospital.

Only patients who are actually sick will be accepted for treatment at the city hospital until further notice, according to Dr. Rolla Henry, the superintendent, who stated that it was necessary to keep the hospital wards uncluttered during the prevalence of influenza in the city.

Another reason for barring persons whose illness does not require confinement in a hospital, Dr. Henry said, is the scarcity of nurses. The city hospital nursing staff now consists of 54 nurses, compared with 90 a year ago. Efforts are being made to obtain the services of several professional nurses.

One Death in East St. Louis.

Nine additional cases of influenza were reported today to the East St. Louis Board of Health, making a total of 46 reported since Jan. 1. Twelve cases and one death were reported yesterday. The death was that of Little M. Rhodes, 16 years old, a student at the Lincoln (negro) High School.

Health Commissioner Lillis today had a motion-picture slide prepared which will be displayed in the motion-picture theaters, reading: "Do not cough in this theater unless you have a handkerchief over your mouth. Influenza is increasing in this city. Do your part to prevent it. See your doctor at once if you have a sore throat, chills, fever or headache."

79 INFLUENZA DEATHS IN CHICAGO IN 24 HOURS, WITH 2226 NEW CASES

Freer Ventilation of Street Cars Urged as a Precaution

A REQUEST for freer ventilation of street cars as a measure for prevention of influenza has been made by the United Railways by the Central Council of Social Agencies.

A recommendation that two transoms in the front and two in the rear of each car be kept open during the time it is in service carrying passengers was made.

Health Commissioner Starkloff has asked the United Railways to keep open six ventilators on each street car. During the influenza epidemic last year transoms and windows were kept open.

Manager Perkins of the company said car ventilators are kept open, the only way to increase ventilation would be to take out windows and transoms, as passengers close them at once when they are opened. The majority of passengers prefer heat to ventilation, Perkins said.

State Department Hears Havana Has 6000 Cases, and That American Ports Are Being Guarded.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Six thousand cases of influenza have been reported in Havana, Cuba, the Public Health Service was advised today by its representative in that city. The service announced that all possible precautions to prevent an influx of the disease into the United States were being taken both at Havana and at American ports.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Influenza and pneumonia claimed 79 deaths in Chicago within the 24-hour period ending at 9 a. m., according to reports to the Health Department today. The number of new influenza cases mounted to 2226, a new high mark for a 24-hour period. Pneumonia cases also increased, 237 being reported.

The malady continued to appear in a mild form and Dr. John Dill Robertson, Health Commissioner, declared "the further the epidemic goes the more definitely the mild character of the disease is proved."

Relief was promised from the serious shortage of nurses by announcements that the local American Red Cross chapter had called its 2300 trained nurses into service, and that 600 trainees from the Visiting Nurses' Association were co-operating with municipal health authorities.

Special orders detailing extra precautions to be taken against influenza were issued today to all army posts and camps in the Central Department by Major-General Sturgis, acting in the absence of Major-General Wood. The orders supplement the Surgeon-General's instructions of Oct. 12, 1918.

Of chief interest to the doughboys is a provision that "reville should be at as late an hour as practicable" to give the men more sleep. Eight to nine hours' sleep every night is prescribed.

Spread of the contagion from Chicago and other Northern Illinois points to towns in Southern Illinois was reported today by the State Department of Public Health.

Dr. Robertson ordered a number of moving picture houses closed for failure to comply with ventilation and sanitary ordinances. He also ordered milk pasteurization temperature raised from 145 to 155 degrees.

AMERICAN TROOPS CAPTURE GENERAL IN SIBERIAN CLASH

U. S. Soldiers Repulse Attack of Semenoff Force With Three Casualties, Taking 55 Prisoners and Killing 5.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—As a result of the clash between a detachment of American soldiers and Semenoff forces, Jan. 19, near Potoskiy, General, officers and 48 men of the Russian forces were captured and still are held, the War Department was advised today by Major-General Graves, commander of the Siberian expeditionary force.

Gen. Graves described the attack as entirely unprovoked.

The American casualties were one man killed, one man died of wounds and one severely wounded, while five Russians were killed and one severely wounded.

The opposing forces were manning armored trains. Gen. Graves said the "Russians attacked 28 Americans who fought off the Russians and then in turn attacked. The Russian car and its crew was captured."

Gen. Graves expressed the opinion that the matter could be "adjusted peacefully with Semenoff, who could not have been responsible."

22 ARTICLES OF FOOD REACHED RECORD PRICES IN DECEMBER

Washington Bureau of Labor Report Shows 12 Decreased, and 10 Remained Stationary.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Twenty-two articles of food reached record prices in December, according to a report issued today by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The prices were 2.6 per cent higher than in November, 5 per cent higher than in the preceding December and 49 per cent higher than in December, 1917.

Of the 44 articles of food for which prices were obtained during the month, Nov. 1 to Dec. 15, 12 increased in price, 12 decreased and 10 remained stationary. Increases were as follows:

Cabbage, 36 per cent; onions, 17 per cent; granulated sugar, 15 per cent; strictly fresh eggs, 11 per cent; potatoes, 10 per cent; raisins, 5 per cent; flour, 4 per cent; butter and storage eggs, 3 per cent each; fresh milk and canned salmon, 2 per cent each; lamb, evaporated milk, oleomargarine, cheese, macaroni, rice, canned peas and bananas, 1 per cent each.

Baker Opposes Wood's Promotion.

NEW FEDERAL BUILDING SITE MUST BE CLEAR IN 60 DAYS

Fountain Rothwell, Custodian of Federal Property in St. Louis, today received instructions from Washington to have the site of the new Federal Building at the southeast corner of Fourth and Chestnut streets cleared within 60 days.

The site has frontages of 152 feet on Chestnut street and 119 feet on Fourth street. It is occupied by a four-story brick building. The Government bought the site in 1911 for $200,000.

President Wilson a few days ago signed a bill authorizing the erection of a $1,000,000 Federal Building on the site.

VON BERNSTORFF'S WAR MESSAGES TO BERLIN REVEALED

London Paper Prints What Is Given as a Summary of Warnings Against U-Boat Warfare.

TORPEDOING SUSSEX CALLED A BLUNDER

Von Jagow Was Skeptical of "Naive Wilson;" President and House Clever at "Keeping Secrets."

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The telegrams of Count von Bernstorff, former German Ambassador at Washington, to his Government, from April, 1916, to February, 1917, are published in Berlin, according to the Daily Mail's correspondent, who sends a summary.

It begins with von Bernstorff's description of the situation caused in America by the torpedoing of the Lusitania, the Ambassador saying that the White House regarded the situation as hopeless, and adding: "A repetition of such blunder would force America into the war against us, which President Wilson would greatly regret, because, in a few months, he would like to bring about peace." Von Bernstorff asks for "instructions on which I can calm the United States Government, which now doubts our bonafides."

On June 7, 1916, Von Jagow, then Foreign Minister, telegraphed to the Ambassador regarding American peace efforts, saying:

"We are skeptical of the mediation of a statesman whose whole conception so inclines to the British standpoint and who is so naive as Wilson."

Told to Watch Wilson.

Von Bernstorff was therefore instructed to watch President Wilson's intentions regarding mediation, adding, if they coincided with the British inclination to enter thereupon, "it will task your excellency to prevent Wilson from approaching us with a positive suggestion of mediation."

The Ambassador on July 12, concerned as to how the impending election would affect relations, declared that President Wilson's "only thought is his re-election," and says: "another Lusitania would be necessary to bring America into the war." He adds: "Peaceful money making is the sole life interest of the American. Only when he believes himself deeply wronged does he allow himself to be drawn into a hysterical desire for war."

Later, the Chancellor urged Von Bernstorff to encourage the President to issue a spontaneous appeal for peace, which he said would be gladly accepted by Germany, adding: "If the President cannot come to this decision alone, he must combine with the Pope, the King of Spain and European neutrals in common action which could not be rejected by the entente and would secure President Wilson's re-election and his historical fame."

Regarding President Wilson's manifesto of Dec. 21, Herr Zimmerman (the Foreign Secretary) informed Von Bernstorff that, although Germany would reply to the President's invitation by suggesting an immediate conference of the belligerents, they would not consent that it be held in America.

"Clever at Keeping Secrets." Subsequently Von Bernstorff telegraphed Von Bethmann Hollweg that Col. House "requested" absolutely confidential negotiations, of which only he, President Wilson and Von Bernstorff would know anything. Absolute discretion would be secured in the circumstances as both President Wilson and Col. House are pretty clever at keeping secrets, contrary to other Americans."

Nothing came of this, and after that Von Bethmann Hollweg's notification of the beginning of ruthless submarine warfare was received by Von Bernstorff. His despairing reply that war would in that case be inevitable drew from Berlin the instructions to "adapt your thoughts to the American mentality."

The Ambassador's attempt again to delay the submarine warfare and to have Germany state her peace terms to President Wilson was recorded in the telegrams, together with the reply that postponement was impracticable.

WHIPPING OF WOMEN ORDERED DISCONTINUED AT ATLANTA JAIL

City Council Also to Investigate Feasibility of Discontinuing Flogging of Male Prisoners.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 22.—Whipping of women at the City Stockade was ordered discontinued entirely by the Prison Committee of the Atlanta City Council yesterday after a public hearing of charges brought by the Atlanta Humane Society that women had been strapped to a contrivance resembling a chair and flogged.

A committee was appointed to investigate the practicability of discontinuing flogging of male prisoners. Inmates of the City Stockade are persons convicted in Police Court.

WOMEN'S WINTER COATS AND SUITS

CHOICE OF THE BASEMENT SHOPS

$25.00

Tomorrow, without any restrictions, we offer choice of any Vandervoort Quality Coat or Suit in the Basement Shops, regardless of former price or actual worth at $25

It was not our intention to quote the original selling prices because they do not really tell the actual value of the garments. It is a well-known fact that Vandervoort's New Basement Shops never offer any regular priced merchandise. Unless the garment is an exceptional value it cannot find a place here. Therefore the prices, $28.50, $32.50, $39.75 and $45 that these Coats and Suits were formerly marked, do not fully express their true worth, for every one was intended to sell for more.

The Suits—

MANY of the season's smartest styles are represented in silvertones, velours, tinseltone and Yalama cloth. There are all sizes from 16 to 44 in the selection, but not in each style or color. The colors include navy, taupe, Burgundy, heather green, etc. Many beautiful fur-trimmed Suits are in the selection. Come early and take your choice of any Suit in the lot for $25.

Outside Entrance on Ninth Street, or Entrances from Main Store.

WE expect this sale to bring thousands of new customers to the Basement Shops, for we have never before offered such remarkable Coats and Suits at such a ridiculously low price.

Remember—many of the best values will be offered in garments where there are only one or two of a kind so that your earliest possible attendance is sure to be more favorable to you.

The Coats—

EVERY size from 16 to 46 will be offered in the beginning, but we advise early selection for the styles are desirable and many will go quickly. Nearly all the Coats are silk lined and the outer materials are velours, Boliyas, polo, plumette and silvertip Bolivia, in such colors as navy, Reindeer, Burgundy, taupe, Elk and black. Fur trimmings and collars of sealine, nutria or dyed opossum also offer a good selection. Choice, $25.

Plenty of salespeople to wait upon you promptly.

A Detective Story by Isabel Ostrander.

CHAPTER XXI (Continued).

Mrs. Foxe gave a stifled scream and buried her face in her hands, while her husband leaned as if for support on the back of her chair, his own face suddenly gray.

"Then don't ask us any more!" he cried hoarsely. "We don't know who the man was, or anything about it. Ivy may have had enemies, but good God! what have we to do with it?"

"Mrs. Foxe," Terhune's voice was quiet but compelling. "You naturally know more of Ivy Collins' affairs and secrets than your husband. You were in her confidence and it will be of no avail to pretend you were not aware of her fears, for we have proof of the contrary. Who was that man?"

She dropped her hands with a little hopeless gesture.

"Yes, it is true! She was afraid, mortally afraid, but she would never tell us who or what threatened her. We could not force her to speak. Believe it or not, as you please; I can tell you no more."

Her trembling lips pressed tight, as if a seal had been laid upon them, and she glanced swiftly at Terhune, but read his knowledge of her lie in the stern, unwavering eyes bent upon her. She sprang wildly to her feet.

"I will answer no more of your questions! If she was murdered as you say, find the man for yourself! I know nothing, nothing!"

CHAPTER XXII.

"A CIRCUS girl, was she? And somebody tried to get her with a revolver last spring? It looks like there was going to be no end to the new things cropping up all the time," Denny remarked later.

"You never had a case to equal this in the old days on the force, Mac. I'll bet Terhune never saw the beat of it, either!"

"True for you! When I went to him after leaving you this morning he had it all cut and dried that Foxe was the guilty one, but he changed his mind when he saw how two of them took the news of whom the dead girl really was."

"And they wouldn't give in that they'd an idea who the murderer could be?"

McCarty shook his head and took a fresh grip upon the cigar in the corner of his mouth.

"They would not. For two hours and more he hammered at them, first threatening and then persuading, but they stuck to the lie in a dogged kind of a way, although they knew right enough that we were on to them."

"But why?" Denny exclaimed. "That's what gets me. If they know, and they were true friends of the girl, why would they want to shield the man that killed her? You'd think they'd be ready to fly at his throat."

"They don't want to shield him, you can be sure of that," responded McCarty. "They'll be two thankful people the day we lay our hands on him, but they don't dare open their lips. They know that after killing the girl he'll be desperate and stop at nothing, and they're in deadly fear of him. 'Tis that shut their mouths. If he could get into a flat that was bolted and chained up, once, he can do it again, and they've no mind to turn informers and wake up some morning dead themselves."

"If he can't induce that Foxe couple to talk, there's nothing for him to do but try to trace back through the girl's history for a clue to someone who had reason to wish her dead," returned McCarty. "He won't believe there's anything in what she tried to say to me. I'd like to find that young fellow who helped me carry her in, I can tell you that. I can't get him out of my head, and the way he looked when I saw him in the crowd outside the Quimby house on the day of the funeral."

"The fellow with the funny, long face and big flapping ears like a clown? I remember your telling me of him." Denny suddenly seized his friend in a dexterous grasp, and swung him out of the path of a passing motor. "Do you want to get run down, entirely? Stopping in the middle of the street and staring like a rube?"

McCarty was indeed staring as if a light had dawned upon him, and now he chuckled softly, ignoring the rebuke.

"Denny, our friend, Terhune is welcome to all his little registering and charting machines as long as I have you along with me. When it comes to hitting the bull's-eye blindfolded, you beat any fancy shot going."

"And what is it now?" demanded his friend. "I've no notion at all of what you're getting at, but mind where you're going or you'll land in a hospital!"

"They reached their destination, but McCarty walked past the entrance."

"Come on a bit till I show you something," he said. "Between the Glamorgan, here, and this apartment house next door there's a narrow space, a kind of a court, like. No one could have come over the roofs, because the Glamorgan is only eight stories high, and the next building is 12."

"There are windows in both buildings opening on the court, though, and they're level with each other on every floor," Denny commented. "A fellow that was spry enough could easily jump from one to the other."

That's what you're getting at, isn't it? Even so, he'd not land in Foxe's apartment, but in one of those smaller ones on the side of this house, and he had no accomplice in the building, had he?"

"None that's been doped out, yet," replied McCarty, "and if he had, that wouldn't give us a hint as to how he got in the apartment where he did the murder. I just wanted you to get an idea of the outside surroundings of the house."

"What joins it around on the avenue side?" Denny asked.

"Another apartment even higher than this one. We'll have a look up on the roof when we get through inside."

The Foxes' apartment was in even more wild disorder than on McCarty's visit of the morning. It was as if its occupants had fled in the face of a threatened catastrophe, seizing what lay nearest to their hands and flinging the rest about in a frenzy. Only the room of the tragedy had been straightened and rearranged; the papers and trash had disappeared and the shades were decently lowered. The adjoining bedroom, too, which had been the dead girl's, was in order and seemed already, in spite of its flaunting draperies and bright colors, to wear an air of desolation.

"And this is where she was killed," Denny was standing before the window in the library.

"Yes. When the man appeared, Marion Rowntree came back in the little three-cornered place by the piano, like this!" McCarty endeavored to suit the action to the word, but finding that his girl did not lend herself to an illustration, he stepped aside hastily lest he evoke critical comment. "You remember when she told us first on the train coming back from Chicago, I asked her which way he went, but she'd been too overcome with the horror of it to notice. She said he just appeared from nowhere, like, and then vanished again. I don't get it at all."

"He must have gone through the archway into the parlor, and down the hall," Denny hazarded. "Come till we look at the doors."

They examined them both thoroughly, experimenting with the locks and chain, but could come to only one conclusion. If Ivy Collins had fastened them, as Marion Rowntree was prepared to swear, no human agency could have opened them from the outside.

Returning once more to the library, Denny threw up the windows and looked out, but no jutting cornice or ledge ran beneath and there was no foothold where a man, be he ever so agile, could have clung.

"Unless he was hiding in the flat all the time in spite of her searching, I give it up," declared McCarty. "The two fireplaces are fakes, with no chimney he could have squeezed down, and a man can't pass through solid walls. Denny, where've you got to?"

But Denny did not reply. He was hanging perilously out of the air-shaft window in the bedroom, craning his neck upward, and his whole body quivered with excitement like a pointer with his quarry. He drew back at last, dusting his hands upon his trousers, and turned to McCarty with an odd gleaming in his eyes.

"You said something awhile back about going up on the roof," he said, his voice shaking with an effort to speak calmly. "I'd like to have a look up there right now."

"What is it?" McCarty asked curiously. "Have you got an idea about it, Denny? You don't think he came in that window?"

"Never mind what I think," Denny said, leading the way to the door. "I want to see that roof!"

"They ascended quickly and Denny was through the trap-door and out like a cat without waiting for his bulkier companion. He was already at the air-shaft opening when McCarty clambered out upon the roof and he knelt by the extreme edge, waving frantically.

McCarty hastened panting to him, but all he saw were two stout pipes which lay across the top of the shaft bisecting it, and ran along to a leader at the cornice. He drew back, shivering, from the brink of the well-like opening.

"Come away from the edge of that, Denny!" he growled. "Tis a wonder you're not killed a dozen times a day, with the risks you run! Do you see that?" Denny pointed triumphantly to one of the conduits. "See the wide shiny mark on that pipe?"

"I do!" His friend's excitement was communicating itself to McCarty, and he dropped down on all fours as near the opening as he dared. "It looks as if it had been rubbed up and polished."

"That's just what happened! And it's a rope rubbing around it that burnished it, Mac! A rope with a weight swinging on the end of it—the weight of the man that let himself down to that bedroom window and evened his score with Ivy Collins!"

IEWS IN CAPITAL ON HOOVER FOR THE PRESIDENCY

Most people here are Democrats before I support him. I am tired of experiments in candidates.

Senator Harding (Rep.), Ohio: The world has made a mistake in declaring that it would support an independent party. Parties are necessary in this country. The people should stick to their political organizations.

Senator Kirby (Dem.), Arkansas: I don't think that either old party is in position to induce Mr. Hoover. There are other people I would prefer to Hoover as the Democratic nominee.

Senator Robinson (Dem.), Arkansas: Hoover is very popular in this country.

Senator Smith (Dem.), South Carolina: The Republicans are welcome to Hoover. I would like a man who has been more closely identified with America.

Senator Wolcott (Dem.), Delaware: I will support any man the San Francisco convention nominates.

Senator Simmons (Rep.), North Carolina: The Hoover movement no doubt grows out of the fact that many people in the country are dissatisfied with the two old parties and would reach out after something new and different. I have not made up my mind whom I will support for the presidential nomination.

Representative Charles M. Stedman (Dem., last of the Confederate army officers in the House), North Carolina: I want a Democrat for President. I have been absolutely loyal to President Wilson and am very fond of him, but he has appointed too many Republicans to office and they are now stabbing him in the back. Nobody knows where Hoover stands. I would not think of supporting him for the nomination under such conditions. But if the San Francisco convention nominates him I will vote for him.

"Accomplished Wonderful Work." Rep. Hugh S. Hersman (Democrat, of the Eighth California Congressional District, in which is Mr. Hoover's home): I think Mr. Hoover is one of the strongest figures before the public today. He has accomplished a wonderful work, and will make a very strong candidate. I am not for anybody, however, right now. The American people would be proud of a President like that.

Rep. Julius Kahn (Republican, California, in whose district Mr. Hoover formerly lived): I am a great friend and admirer of Mr. Hoover. Mr. Hoover is a gentleman of splendid executive ability, and a man as well informed in world affairs as any man prominent before the American people at this time. I hear a great deal of comment among Republicans that in having written the letter endorsing the President's appeal to his fellow-countrymen to elect all Democrats to Congress they do not feel that he is justified in appealing to Republican members of Congress for their support. Of course, that is a matter which rests with each individual.

Rep. Weaver (Democrat, N. C.): If the Democrats should nominate Mr. Hoover for the presidency he will have my hearty support. That is all that I can say at this time.

"Harks Back to Greeley Times." Chairman Fess, of the Republican Congressional Committee:—It would mean absolutely nothing if the world's reference is to the Republican candidacy. The Democratic interests would likely have a Democrat in mind when they would name a candidate for the Republicans. It is very significant if the world is for Hoover as the Democratic nominee. It is generally conceded here that Hoover is the choice of the President in case he is not in the race. It is the general feeling in the House that Mr. Hoover is the President's candidate. It would indicate the sad state of Democratic affairs in selecting a man who, while loyal to the administration, has never been known to be a Democrat. It harks back to the Greeley times of 1872 and will have the same result.

Rep. Evans (Democrat, Mont.): Mr. Hoover is one of the really capable men in the world today.

Rep. Rodenberg (Republican, Ill.): Mr. Hoover is a man of ability, but this country is governed by parties, and always will be. Unfortunately, no one knows what party he belongs to. For that reason he has about as much chance of being President as the editor of the World has.

Rep. James F. Byrnes (Democrat, S. C.): I am for Mitchell Palmer.

Rep. Robinson (Democrat, N. C.): I am opposed to nominating any man who has no political convictions or party affiliation. No one knows, so far as I am able to learn, what Mr. Hoover's political convictions are.

"Where Does He Stand?" Representative Hoey (Dem., N. C.): I do not believe in picking up a man to head the Democratic ticket without knowing just where he stands on party matters. Therefore Mr. Hoover's candidacy does not appeal to me. I have not seen it stated anywhere that he is a Democrat.

Representative Rogers (Rep., Mass.): The world's declaration is very interesting and I think it will strike a responsive chord in a great many people of both parties.

Representative John H. Small (Dem., N. C.): I believe that I am with the world if it can be shown that Mr. Hoover is a Democrat. If he can and will support our party platform he seems to be the most available person we can nominate.

Representative Crisp (Dem., Ga.): I am not for Mr. Hoover.

Representative Enoch (Rep., Wis.): There is no question about Mr. Hoover's executive capacity, not only in the United States, but throughout Europe. I do not know how strong he would be if his name was presented to the country. If he wished to become a candidate he would soon have to select a party. We elect by party and platform in this country. During his residence abroad he has not belonged to any party, although that might be an advantage.

Representative McClintic (Dem.,

(Ok.)—The entire Oklahoma delegation is behind Senator Robert L. Owen. We feel that he has had a sufficient amount of experience. "Must Have Independent Vote." Representative Fou (Dem., N. C.): We must have the independent vote to win the next election. I think that Hoover is the man to get it. If he is a Democrat I will be for him.

Representative Nolan (Rep., Cal.): I am for Johnson on any ticket—all the way.

Representative Henry T. Rainey (Dem., Ill.): Mr. Hoover is the best advertised man in the world, and splendidly qualified for any executive position. It is too soon, however, to pick out the candidates. The pendulum has swung just as far against the Democratic party as it can go, and has commenced to go in the other direction. It is impossible now to tell who should be nominated or is likely to be nominated, and will be for two or three months. Personally, I would not want to attempt to even guess the Democratic nominee. Whoever he is he must have elements of strength and be prepared to lead in the new conditions which meet us at the present time. These qualifications apply to all the candidates who have been suggested.

Representative Godwin (Dem., N. C.): I know nothing of Mr. Hoover except what I have seen in the press, but if the Democrats choose to name him to head the ticket he will get my vote.

SALE of SPRING SUITS

An announcement of this sort, so far in advance of the Spring season, not only exemplifies the constant activity this store exercises to present, to the women of St. Louis, the new fashions as quickly as they are released by the manufacturers, but it carries a message of economy as well, which, to many, is far more important.

We Pride Ourselves on Being Able to Quote the Following Low Price, for We Feel That Few Women Expected to Be Able to Buy a New Spring Suit So Thoroughly Reasonable.

Spring Suits
Like These

These New Spring Models Are Worth Up to $59.50

SEE these Suits—you will MARVEL at the thought that such lovely Spring styles are available now at such a low price—and wonder, too, how we can do it. However, the main point is that the Suits are here—the price unquestionably low and the values extraordinary. We don't expect to be able to duplicate such suits at this price again this season.

SERGE—The One "Best Bet" for Spring Suits

—And if you will inquire as to the present cost per yard of fine, all-wool serge, you will readily see the advisability—the convenience and the value of buying a high-class, ready-to-wear Serge Suit in this sale tomorrow. In fact, we doubt if these Suits could be purchased from the manufacturer today at the price we are selling them.

Thrift in Industry

Today the Y. M. C. A. is calling the country's attention to the value of thrift in industry, emphasizing the need for factory thrift, and the economic gain that results from co-operation between labor and capital.

The laborer who has a savings account and produces more than he consumes is a capitalist.

We can help him with his first deposit, then with a home of his own, then with a business, then with investments in bonds and mortgages, then with the larger problems of corporate organization and finance.

In America the laborer is a capitalist and the capitalist a laborer—there is no class distinction between them.

Their interests are identical because they are identical.

We have earnest, interested service to offer every St. Louisan.

VIEWS IN CAPITAL ON HOOVER FOR THE PRESIDENCY

tionist, Cal.)—If either party does name Mr. Hoover, good night! The people are looking for somebody they can go to. The World has got the politicians scared.
Representative Osborne (Rep., Cal.)—I have a very high opinion of Mr. Hoover. I think he would make a good president. He is a self-made man. My two oldest sons were in Stanford University with him. When they arrived and went to their rooms they found a young fellow waiting for them. He explained he was the student agent for a laundry and wanted to get their business before anyone else. That was Herbert C. Hoover.

Representative Phil Campbell (Rep., Kan.)—This is not a Government by men. It is a Government by law and the executive has the duty of enforcing the laws made by Congress. Wise laws are more essential in the next four years than a spectacular executive.
Representative Heflin (Dem., Ala.)—I am for a man for president who is known to be a Democrat and who has been affiliated with the Democratic party.

Representative Kelly (Rep., Mich.)—Mr. Hoover is a sort of world citizen. I would rather vote for an avowed Republican.
Representative Flood (Dem., Va.)—I think Mr. Hoover is a remarkable man and has tremendous strength in the country, but I do not understand that he is a candidate for the presidency.

Representative Johnson (Rep., Wash.)—I am for Mr. Hoover. I do not know what Mr. Hoover's platform is.
Representative Doughton (Dem., N. C.)—Mr. Hoover looks pretty good to me. We need a business man.

Representative Byrnes (Dem., Tenn.)—He is a very good man. What is his politics?

Representative Hawley (Rep., Oregon)—I shall wait until the convention.

Representative Wingo (Dem., Ark.)—I do not know what he stands for. I do not know where he is on reconstruction legislation, on currency, tariff and other important matters.

Representative Baer (Rep., N. D.)—The World's editorial on Mr. Hoover shows the people's demand for some man that is independent of party machines. There will be an even greater demand for such a man if Congress passes some of the drastic and repulsive legislation such as the Sterling-Graham session bill and other peace-time espionage bills.

Representative Keller (Ind., Minn.)—The people are looking for men who are not rubber-stamp men. They want men of principle, regardless of party, and men who are big enough to stand for their convictions. Personally, I feel that the man who should have the nomination is Senator Johnson.

Representative Barbour (Rep., Cal.)—The World has made a pretty good suggestion. Personally, I am strongly for Senator Johnson. I feel that he is really the biggest man of the whole lot. Next to him, I think Mr. Hoover would be my choice.
Representative Cullen (Dem., N. Y.)—Mr. Hoover is a man of world-wide reputation, but so far as I am personally concerned, I am going to await development before committing myself.

What Members of the Democratic Committee Think of Hoover.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The World yesterday asked the members of the National Democratic Committee asking their opinions as to Herbert C. Hoover as a candidate or as a possible President. The responses show the party leaders to be inclined to restrict the list of possible candidates to men clearly identified with the party, where, in declining to take a definite position, they plead ignorance of Mr. Hoover's politics.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 21.—The Democratic party, to my thinking, possesses a definite philosophy, projected into definite political principles by duly adopted party platforms. So long as our Government continues to be a Government by parties, common honesty requires that each party shall go to the people upon its own avowed principles and program of action, and that each candidate shall accept the principles and program of his party and shall become their active protagonist in the campaign.

To nominate a Democrat for President on the Republican ticket or a Republican for President on the Democratic ticket is either a grotesque and futile effort to gull the people or a confession of bankruptcy in leadership on the part of the political party so acting, or both.

I favor the nomination of a Democrat on the Democratic ticket. I favor the nomination of a Republican on the Republican ticket. I favor the nomination of a Socialist on the Socialist ticket. I favor the nomination of a citizen of no political principles on no ticket. Which fits Hoover? W. F. CONNOLLY.

Prosperity Under Party Leadership. BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 21.—I put your editorial today concerning the proposed candidacy of Herbert C. Hoover for the presidency with much interest. I, however, disagree with the World's apparent desire to get away from party government.

The United States Government has been a most prosperous one under the leadership and guidance of party politics and party men. There never was a time when strict party government was so important to our country as it is today, from my viewpoint. One of the things that has done much to create Bolshevism, anarchy, Socialism or whatever you want to call it, which all Americans, whether Republicans or Democrats, are against, has been brought about by those who refused to abide by party government and party organization and all that it implies. This Government of ours will not be continued on Next Page.

ICY WINDS NO BAR TO GAUZE-CLAD "FATIMA"

Homage Paid to "Patron Saint" by Washington U. Students in Spectacular Parade.

With the temperature of a world of reality hovering near 20 above, three dozen young men students of the architectural school of Washington University bravely assembled on the quadrangle yesterday noon to be the gauze-clad votaries in a make-believe world of the patron saint of their department—Queen Fatima.

An audience of several hundred gathered to wonder at the costumes and remained to admire the manly beauty of the youths as thus displayed. Coats who shivered, despite their fur coats, and flannel-shirted undergraduates who jeered, composed the audience, massed on the steps before the towers of University Hall.

To the Oriental strains of a "Turkish Jazz Band," the court of the Queen and her consort, King Omar, wended its processional way from Cupples Hall, across the frozen quadrangle and to the open-air mosque, whose minarets on ordinary days are the battlements of the granite building. Whether from a feeling of religious ecstasy or fear of the influenza, the courtiers danced continuously and the Queen shimmied in her palanquin to keep her bare shoulders from freezing.

Dancing Girls in Court.

"Dancing girls" and fawning courtiers made up the court. Present also were the "original Turkish," in the form of a huge, lighted cigarette; the high priest of St. Fatima, being Alfred Norrish walking within a dwarfed Temple of Architecture, and the Spirit of Fatimism (Douglas Coudie), who emerged from a suspicious-looking barrel labeled "Dina Might," to perform a spirited, not to say abandoned, dance.

"Architects" consented to act as ambassadors from the other schools of the university and they portrayed the parts admirably. There was a pillar from the medical school, carrying a huge saw and wearing a butcher's apron; "a Dent" who smilingly exhibited an overgrown tooth as he babbled "It won't hurt a bit," the college boy ("rah! rah!"), with a beautiful red Windsor tie; "engineers," who had turned into wild men from overstudy, and a red-nosed "lawyer," who shot craps in accordance with university tradition.

The art school's representative attracted much attention. "She" was clad in pink fleshings that had once served the wearer on the track of Francis Field, a sweet smile and an abbreviated barrel, which bore the explanation, "life model." The model assured the gazers that not timidity but the icy breeze caused that shaking of the legs.

Prayed for Victory in Exams.

King Omar and the high priest prayed in their wildest and most intriguing fashion, but Allah vouchsafed no answer. "Oh, Allah, grant that these most lowly and bewitched creatures of the universe, the faculty, may be worsted in that battle of the wits which starts tomorrow," they implored for their subjects who were terrified by the recent proclamation of final examinations, beginning today.

Allah remained voiceless through this and failed of exclamation, even when the flower of the court performed the latest jazz steps from Bagdad. But when Queen Fatima arose and begged his intercession he was moved to pity. From somewhere beyond the towers his prophetic voice came through space.

"Fear not," he said. "After the conflict these despicable prods may still exist, but they will never look the same. My children, the engineers, the architects, shall be triumphant. Nay, furthermore, I grant that the Carrie Nations of the nation shall never touch their inspiration, the weed of solace."

The pagant ended in a riot of color as the shivering participants ran for blankets and warm showers.

KANSAS CONFEREES AGREE ON INDUSTRIAL COURT BILL

Measure Little Changed From Draft as Originally Reported to Senate.

By the Associated Press.
TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 22.—House and Senate conferees last night reached an agreement on the bill establishing a court of industrial relations and the spent articles submitted to both houses of the Legislature for final action today. The bill is not materially changed from the draft as originally reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The agreement provides for the elimination of the amendment bringing mills, elevators and other middlemen handling foodstuffs under jurisdiction of the court. The open shop amendment and the amendment requiring labor contracts to be approved by the court before they are binding.

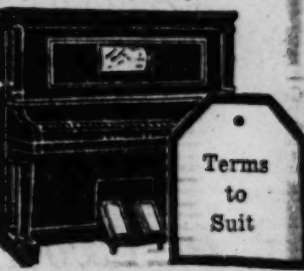

The bill as it now stands gives the jurisdiction over the production and transportation of foods, clothing and fuel, and common carriers are declared invested with a public interest. The court is also given power to regulate and in emergencies operate such industries when the public welfare demands, as well as to investigate wages, living and working conditions, controversies between employers and employees and to issue such orders as are just and reasonable.

Interference with the continuity of production of an essential industry, except on order by the court, is made a felony or misdemeanor. This includes strikes, lockouts, picketing, sympathetic strikes and conspiracies to hinder production. The right of collective bargaining is recognized.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with harsh, drastic medicines. The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They do not injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place. Headaches, "dullness" and that lousy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "lousy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 25c.

DANDRUFFY HEADS BECOME HAIRLESS

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't. It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid kerosene; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid kerosene at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need to matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

35 CARNEGIE MEDALS AWARDED FOR HEROISM

$5820 a Year in Pensions Granted to Dependents of Seven Who Lost Lives.

By the Associated Press.
PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 22.—Thirty-five acts of heroism were recognized by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission at its sixteenth annual meeting here today. Two silver medals and 33 bronze medals were awarded. Thirteen persons lost their lives while trying to save others and pensions aggregating $5820 a year were granted to the dependents of seven of them, while to the dependents of three others $4100 were awarded to be spent as the commission may sanction. In seven cases $11,200 was given for educational purposes, and in 13 cases $9500 was awarded for other worthy causes.

Two of those who lost their lives were little girls, Lotte Steen who was killed while trying to drag a 9-year-old boy from a railroad track in front of an approaching train, at Dale, Minn., and Marjorie A. Brown, 14, who was drowned while trying to save a girl companion in the Goose River at Belfast, Me.

Camera Operator Drowned.
Owen Carter, of 233 East Seventeenth avenue, Denver, Col., a moving picture camera operator, was drowned in the Arkansas River at Canyon City, Colo., July 1, 1914. Mrs. Grace E. Forman, to act her part in a moving picture play, had ridden a horse into the river where the current was swift. The horse fell, and threw Mrs. Forman into the water. Carter was drowned while trying to save her.

Lloyd A. Osborne, a dentist of Sioux City, Io., lost his life at Fremont, Io., while attempting to save another man, and the Rev. Walton E. Bruner of Ekron, Ky., was drowned while trying to save Osborne.

Others who lost their lives while helping their fellows include the following:

Edward J. Butler, Freedonia, N. Y.; Edwin E. Murray, 3505 Powhatan street, Baltimore, Md.; Albert A. Shaline, 863 Parkside place, Cincinnati; Oscar A. Deming, Stuart, Neb.; William H. T. Seamon, Picher, Ok.; George F. Battelger, Porter, Ind.; Albert G. Peterson, Dutton, Mont.; Milton Garter, 45 Hazel street, New Haven, Conn.

Eight Children Among Heroes.
In the list of those who risked their lives in an attempt to save human life were no less than eight children 16 years of age or under. The complete list follows:

Louise B. Smiley, 903 Elk street, Franklin, Pa.; Clarence J. Richards, 528 Sixth street North, St. Petersburg, Fla.; John W. Matheson, Marian Bridge, Cape Breton, N. S.; Michael Moran, Sydney, N. S.; Raymond G. Matson, Lancaster, N. H.; Clarence A. Hitchborn, Fruit, Ark.; R. Austin McDonald, Fortune Bridge, Prince Edward Island; Leo A. Gorman, 1025 Albany street, Utica, N. Y.; Fred M. Clay, Chester, N. S.; Thomas John Boyer, Ragsdale, Ind.; James McCormick, Box 28, R. D. 1, Waco, Tex.; Frederick C. Brown, Boylston, N. S.; H. Harcourt Her, Marano, N. S.; Marcel C. Swift, 214 West Main street, Butler, Ind.; Arnold F. Voss, R. D. 2, St. Anne, Ill.; Merrill W. Roscoe, 128 Houston street, Batavia, Ill.; Clarence H. ## $3000 ALREADY SUBSCRIBED FOR HOME FOR WORKING GIRLS

Proposed Memorial to Mrs. Catherine Springer to Cost $250,000—Campaign to Begin Feb. 1.

Subscriptions amounting to $3000 for a proposed home for working girls to be erected as a memorial to Mrs. Catherine Springer, superintendent of the Memorial Home for the Aged, Grand and Magnolia avenues, who died Jan. 16, were announced at the fifth annual meeting of the St. Louis Women's Christian Association at St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, South, yesterday.

The proposed home will cost $250,000 and will be erected in the downtown district so that the 150 young women whom it will house can walk to and from their places of employment. An active campaign to raise funds for the home will begin Feb. 1 under the direction of Mrs. W. R. Chivria.

DISCIPLES OF CHRIST PLAN TO RAISE $12,000,000 A YEAR

Representatives of Church Discuss Part in Interchurch World Movement.

Plans to raise $12,000,000 a year among the membership of the Disciples of Christ as the first of a five-year series of contributions to the Interchurch World Movement, were discussed by representatives of the international convention of the denomination, in session at the Planters Hotel yesterday.

Work for negro incurables, for whom hospital facilities are now lacking, was discussed. Conversations of pastors and laymen of all denominations, in the interchurch movement, are to be held in the next two months throughout the United States.

February Furniture Sale

Three Days of Courtesy Make Possible Leisurely Selection

As a preliminary of our great February Sale of Furniture are three Days of Courtesy. Friday is the second day. During this time all pieces will be tagged with Sale prices. You make selections at your leisure and indicate the pieces which you desire reserved. Final adjustments and deliveries will be made after January 26th, when the Sale proper will be instituted.

Now, as always, the February Sale of Furniture is arousing much interest. Its wonderfully well made and extremely attractive pieces excite the admiration of every lover of home.

Special attention is drawn to this selling in that market conditions indicate a steady rise for the Spring of 1920. Such prices as are offered now will not be quoted soon again.

Thus the Days of Courtesy enable you to look over the complete stock and make your selections before the hurry and rush of the Sale proper begins.

THE BLACK AND WHITE BEAUTY TREATMENT

Clears the Complexion, Removes Pimples and Unsightly Skin Blemishes.

What would you spend if you could be assured that beauty specialists would be able to clear your complexion, make your rough, pimply, blotchy face, hands, neck and arms—soft, smooth and lovely?

Long ago realizing the need of a preparation that would restore the complexion to its youthful rosy tint—remove unsightly skin blemishes—beauty and skin specialists were put to work to perfect a home treatment to clear the skin of pimples, liver spots, freckles and other imperfections. After many tests and much experiment, Black and White Ointment was offered the public. This creamy application is generally applied before retiring, and when used in connection with Black and White Beauty Soap satisfactory results are guaranteed.

Go to your nearest drug store today and buy the complete treatment of Ointment and Soap for only 50c. If you cannot find it, accept no substitute, but send direct to the manufacturers.

A sample, literature and Black and White Birthday and Dream Book Free if you will clip this advertisement and mail to Black and White, Box 812, Memphis, Tenn.

Has a mother the right to decide how many children she will have?

How the women of Holland have answered the question of birth-control

THE war has made us realize that we cannot afford to ignore anything that claims to improve the health of our children; and this is why Pictorial Review, in line with its forward-looking editorial policy, presents to the thinking women of America the opportunity for considering the much misunderstood subject of scientific birth-control.

Everybody has heard of birth-control, but comparatively few people know what it really means. Many people are shocked at the very word. Pictorial Review does not take sides in this discussion, but when a conservative country like Holland boldly endorses the movement and publishes its reasons for so doing, it is time we looked into the matter judiciously and impartially.

The remarkable story of what the women of Holland have done under the leadership of Dr. Aletta Jacobs is graphically told by Eleanor Kinsella McDonnell in the mid-winter issue of Pictorial Review. In this illuminating and inspiring account, there is valuable information for every woman in America.

In Holland today—Holland, mind you—slow-moving, conventional Holland—they have a smaller death rate and a higher healthy birth rate than in any country in the world. That fact is unescapable. And Dr. Jacobs states that this is due to a sane understanding and appreciation of birth-control. Whether this is so or not, is for the women of America to judge after reading this amazing article.

SOCIETY FOLK IN PLAY IN COSTUMES OF 1825

"Mon General," by Miss Ellen Lee Hoffman, Presented at Wednesday Club.

In a clever little historical sketch, entitled "Mon General," which was presented at the Wednesday Club yesterday, under the auspices of the Poetic Section of the club, debutantes and society matrons of 1920 played the roles of belles and grand dames of 1825, before a large and fashionable audience. All were in the quaint, old-fashioned costumes of almost a century ago. The scene was Maj. Pierre Chouteau's mansion on Main street at the time of Gen. Lafayette's visit here.

Mrs. Herbert Cost, a versatile young society matron, played the lead, and pleased the audience in her part as a demure young girl who was a great worshiper of "Mon General" (Gen. Lafayette). Miss Nancy Walker, one of the season's debutantes, played the part of a vivacious society belle, which was well suited to her. The part of "Mon General" was taken by Gustave Tuckerman, and the remainder of the cast included the Misses Dorothy Walker, Louise Francis, Elizabeth Holliday and Elizabeth Smith, who were society belles; Bme. J. W. Barriger and William Itner as grand dames, and F. Winston Johns and Edward Gorman as aides to Gen. Lafayette.

Not of less importance than the cast is the author, Miss Ellen Lee Hoffman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Hoffman of 5217 Westminster place, who wrote the play especially for the Wednesday Club at the club's request. Miss Hoffman, who was graduated from Vassar College in 1918, has written several plays, one of which was presented by the Washington Square Players in New York.

At the close of the performance yesterday the club members and their guests were invited upstairs to have tea with the author and the members of the cast.

JUST THE THING FOR SORE THROAT

Formamint affords protection from distressing ailments.

In a few days, you know, "just a sore throat" may be something much more serious. Science has proved that the throat is not only the first spot reached by infectious germs, but also forms ideal soil to multiply on.

Throat protection, therefore, means germ destruction. Formamint (which is endorsed by over 5000 American Physicians) is the scientific way of disinfecting the mouth and the throat. Handy to have with you—pleasing in taste—it frees an efficient germicide that mixes with the saliva and so reaches where gargles cannot go—affords protection against distressing ailments that so often follow infection of the throat linings. 60c, all druggists.

BELL EMPLOYEES PROTEST AT REDUCTION OF RATES

The Bell Telephone Employees' Association of Missouri has protested to the Missouri Public Service Commission against that body's recent order reducing telephone service rates and abolishing service connection charges, asserting that if the order is enforced it will reduce the revenue of the company to such a point that it will not be able to grant its employees necessary wage increases at any time in the near future.

"From our intimate position," the protest states, "we are convinced that those engaged in the business are working efficiently and industriously to produce good telephone service at the least possible cost. We believe a review of the books of the company will reveal a small margin of profit with present expenses and the rates established by the Government."

The letter from the employees' organization further stated that if the rates are reduced the efficiency of the service cannot be maintained. The letter is signed by Harry J. Madden as president.

... and at the Hippodrome

A fact:

"Just Enough Turkish"

A Hippodrome audience may truly be called "representative" of the whole United States—so this day-after-day preference for Fatima is highly significant.

For one thing, it shows the broad sweep of Fatima's popularity.

But—more important—it indicates that men generally are growing more sensitive to the taste-effect of too much or too little Turkish tobacco in their cigarettes.

Fatima's "just enough Turkish" blend, in other words, is the one feature which sets it definitely apart from all other cigarettes—and which accounts for its leadership at so many famous places.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight for the rights of the people, never being to any party, always opposing privilege, class and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

JOSEPH PULTZER.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Asks Reed's Resignation.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In the Wednesday issue the Post-Dispatch had this clever little squib: "Missouri's safe Democratic majority migrated to Oklahoma and now that State has wrested from us our leadership in safe production. There's no danger, though, that our avicious neighbor will grab our senior Senator."

Resisting Reed's "welcome" in Oklahoma last fall was very different from the grandstand display at the brazen, audacious, cynical, "scrambled eggs" political affair at St. Louis hotel in "honor" of Mr. Reed, whose chief stock in trade was to misquote and vilify President Wilson, in the hope of getting Reed in line as delegate-at-large in June to misrepresent Missouri democracy in the national convention. But it will miss the point. For once the Missouri Democrats will have a United States Senator out in the field on such an occasion. The Reedites now see where they're at—not in the "hand wagon," but trailing behind in a comparatively small group, without even a sign of a consolation offering. Missouri's thinking democracy is firmly solid with President Wilson. If Senator Reed doesn't believe it, let him resign and offer for re-election this fall—the Roosevelt Campaign Act.

S. D. TRESENTER.

Personal View of So-Called "Cant."
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Will you give to a suffocating spirit such vent as may be found in vociferation? I am tired of cant—cant of all sorts: ministerial, professional and political. Why can we not think with our minds? What are they for? What is the use of telling people about the spiritual leadership of the world? How can they grasp the meaning—with what—how contain it? If I say to Mr. Wilson or any other idealist, "Sir, I am greatly interested in what you say; please tell me whether I, a spiritual leader, should participate in the world? Does he mean himself? If he does, why does he not say so and frankly invite us to follow him blindly in abject trust?"

What is cant? Is it not saying one thing which nobody knows and meaning something else which nobody understands? Idealism is a cloak for every lack of honesty and blunder. If I, being an idealist, command 5000 human beings to be arrested at night on general warrant and confined without a hearing and deported to nowhere because my idea is not theirs or theirs is not mine—what should we, a liberty-loving people, think of such idealism?

Mr. Wilson is a good man; is he therefore to be the arbiter of all men's thinking? Why does he deserve such following? Is it not possible that he may be mistaken? Or, if you will be superior, tell us frankly, clearly, boldly, how we, a democracy who cannot justly, wisely and magnanimously manage our own affairs, have become dependent for the spiritual leadership of the world and the direction of its affairs on remote people whose language we do not know, whose traditions are alien and whose destinies we cannot predict? A general idea is the refuge of incapacity. Tell us why you think we as a nation are superior to all others of God's creating and should attempt to control their affairs.

The Potato Profiters.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In your market quotations potatoes are listed at $4.99 @ 4.75 per 100 pounds delivered. I ran up a commission house and their cheapest price was $6 per 100. Why such a difference in price? Why not give the grower in potatoes as well as the sugar grower, or at least quote the grower's price?

THE RIVER AND H. C. L.

Our American women may not be keenly interested in river and harbor improvements, but they ought to be. One of the fundamental factors in the high cost of living is our idle rivers. The fact that our rivers and railroads have not been merged into an immense, splendid, co-ordinated system of transportation is one of the tragic failures of our statesmanship, a failure peculiarly inexcusable in view of our reputation for ability along practical lines.

The cost levied upon the American people through neglect of our rivers is beyond estimate. The commercial and industrial injury to the people of the Mississippi Valley from failure to utilize the Mississippi River cannot be guessed at. But some idea of it may be had from the replies to letters which Representative Newton recently addressed to a number of business houses in St. Louis. The Newton questionnaire asked, among other things, as to the tonnage such houses could guarantee a barge service and whether the present railroad service was meeting their requirements.

Those answers complete the case for the full utilization of the river. In many instances definite tonnage was pledged. In others it was estimated. Others promise no tonnage at all yet such replies were equally convincing as to the necessity of water transportation. They pointed out the serious disadvantages labor under from inadequate railroad service, coupled with the obvious fact that every ton of freight carried by water will relieve by that much the overburdened railroads.

The solution of our railroad problem is admittedly the biggest individual question in our entire reconstruction catalogue. It ought to be plain that there can be no competent solution which fails to grasp the true relationship between our rivers and our railroads and brings that relationship into being. Our rivers are integral parts of our transportation system, as much so as are our railroads, and they must be welded into a unified service by joint tariffs and allocated patronage before we can realize in full our transportation assets.

Our railroad men are aware of this. Great railroad men, like Director-General Hines, recommends the policy of joint rates as imperative. Representative Newton, whose bill provides for the completion of river projects approved and begun but not yet finished, has submitted the testimony of the St. Louis business houses in behalf of his measure. This testimony should be convincing. But when it is considered that such testimony is the expression of only one city, and when we further consider the hundreds of cities, great and small, in the Mississippi Valley to be served by the river, and the great trade territories of all those cities that would profit from the river at work—when all this is considered the failure longer to utilize the river is indefensible.

The demand for the completion of river projects and for the full utilization of the barge service jointly with railroad service should be supported unconditionally by the people of the valley and their representatives. The country should support the demand. It benefits the whole country because the valley produces for the whole country.

COURAGEOUS PATROLMAN SHEA.

After a few more experiences such as bandits had at the Mercantile Bank and the Water Tower Bank, the attempted robbery of St. Louis financial institutions will become one of the most unpopular of the extra hazardous sports of St. Louis' underworld. May every attempt of the sort have its Patrolman Harry J. Shea, who will show a resourcefulness and courage adequate to the occasion, and may he come out of his victorious battle for the public's safety with casualties no more serious than those which the hero of the encounter at 2100 East Grand avenue received Wednesday.

May all our policemen shoot as straight in a like emergency as Mr. Shea shot.

It was only during the war that Josephus found any peace.

THE PAROLE OF CONVICT FISCHER.

Walter Fischer, one of the desperadoes shot dead while making a thieving raid of unusual daring on the Water Tower Bank, was sent up for five years from this city in 1917. He would at this time have been securely restrained from a career of crime but for his release under parole by Gov. Gardner a few months after his sentence.

This fact, however, casts no discredit on the parole system, which embodies a sound principle in dealing with offenders. But it may cast serious discredit on methods of administering the parole system. Politics should have no place in selecting the beneficiaries of the parole system. Outside pressure should not be permitted to influence decisions. In fact, parole favoritism urged by pressure from outside for a particular convict may be one of the best reasons for delaying action until the merits of the case can be scrutinized. Convicts unable to bring such pressure to bear should not be placed at a disadvantage. Fischer's release after serving only a small part of his five-year sentence for a most serious crime was certainly unusual. As we said when the figures were made public that out of 667 Missouri paroles, only 6 per cent had been revoked, "Good judgment must be coupled with clemency for the best results." The

THE UTTER BANKRUPTCY OF A DEAL.

The assigned reasons for the objectionable deal of last year between the city administration and the United Railways were to prevent the bankruptcy of the traction company and to assure to St. Louis the payment of the mill tax, already more than two million dollars in arrears.

The Post-Dispatch repeatedly pointed out that the dismissal by arbitrary executive act of the suit attacking on substantial grounds the validity of franchises under which a large part of the United Railways mileage was operated was wholly without any quid pro quo to the city. It pointed out that bankruptcy could not be averted. It pointed out that the mill tax arrangement was a concession, not to the city, but to the company, which was permitted to pay an adjudicated debt on the installment plan covering a period of 10 years, when the debt was due at once. It pointed out that if bankruptcy did come the tax claim of the city would be on the same basis as other claims, while the validating of the franchises would furnish an excuse for retaining watered securities on reorganization after the receivership.

Insolvency and a receiver for the company came only a few weeks after the deal was consummated in defiance of public protests and businesslike methods. Wednesday the last pretense of justification for the deal vanished, when a judgment for $2,396,321 of the mill tax was taken unopposed in the Circuit Court. Default even on the early installment due Jan. 14 was made. The company has the franchises and the city is back exactly where it was before the great blunder was perpetrated—it has a mill tax judgment and small prospect of collecting on it.

Rarely does exposure come in so prompt and merciless a form of the true character of betrayals by the combines of invisible government for the benefit of politics and big business. Both parties to the deal have now been overtaken by bankruptcy—the United Railways and the officials who jammed the thing through. The bankruptcy of the latter in performance and public confidence is complete.

BORAH TO WOOD.

Senator Borah, quizzier-in-chief of presidential candidates, has addressed his second inquiry to Gen. Wood. It covers much the same ground as did the Lowden letter, but there is a complimentary conclusion which was omitted from the epistle to the Governor of Illinois. "Your calling and your training," runs the note, "are conducive to directness and candor. I anticipate, therefore, no difficulty in understanding your position when you have had time to make reply."

Possibly the high expectations of the Idaho statesman will be realized. The public, though, may have some misgivings. True, the profession of arms reputedly makes for bluntness of speech. But this warrior candidate has already given an astonishing exhibition of caution. Asked for an opinion on the suspension of the Socialist members of the New York Assembly he took noncommittal refuge in his uniform.

Further, Gen. Wood has also denied that he is a soldier by choice. His profession, he has explained, is that of physician and surgeon. Another instance or two of side-stepping and the public will begin to suspect that politician fits him more snugly than does General or doctor.

For the adventurous youth seeking a career of excitement there is the job of clerking in a bank.

CONGRESS AND SOLDIERS' PAY.

Two bills are pending in Congress, the Crago bill in the House and the Wadsworth bill in the Senate, which propose an increase of 20 per cent in pay for men in the army, navy, coast guard and public health service. Most of those men, it is understood, are receiving the same pay now that they did in 1910. It is a conservative measure of relief that is proposed.

But the relief has not been granted. It is only proposed. Why has not Congress passed those bills? Surely there is nothing complicated about the proposition. Anyone capable of doing the simplest problem in arithmetic can see the necessity and justice of this modest wage increase. The question is not debatable.

The inertia of Congress is proverbial. People accept it, rather tolerantly, as a rule. Sometimes, though, there is revolt. A notable instance was the action of the railroad brotherhoods which, in connection with the Adamson bill, "held a time watch" on the deliberations. Congress resented it. Public opinion did not approve such intimidation. But the wretched genius for procrastination unhappily characteristic of Congress was responsible in large part for that demonstration.

The army and navy cannot compel Congress to grant this scant measure of relief. But the failure of Congress to do so is shameful, just the same.

The allied statesmen seem determined to lift the ex-Kaiser from the want-ad column to the first page.

MR. ANTWERP'S OPINION.

"It looks as if our two great and grand old parties had done for themselves," Mr. Antwerp said. "A people's patience can be exhausted, and our own seems not to have survived the deadlock over the peace treaty. There is widespread disgust with both Democratic and Republican, and all the independent support the old parties have enjoyed is detaching itself for the presidential campaign."

"The trouble, as I see it, has largely resulted from the political atmosphere of Washington. It is intensely partisan. We cannot understand how our representatives in Congress should put party above country, but that is because we do not follow them to Washington. Once they get into Washington they lose the perspective they had at home. Human nature could do nothing else. That is the influence of Washington."

"The people are sick of this sort of thing. They realize that parties are necessary to free government, but they have lost patience with partisanship. Thanks to the atmosphere of Washington, the Democrats could not forget during the war that they were Democrats; and when the peace treaty came over the Republicans could not forget they were Republicans. The people like to think that we are all Americans first and whatever else we are afterward. The indications of their impatience with excessive partisanship are such that one wonders how the old parties are to survive their folly. Imagine the movement to make Mr. Hoover the next President, no matter what his politics are! That must seem to Washington as immoral a proposition as has ever been made. We may be sure that both the Democrats and Republicans in Washington will fight it."

"However, it begins to look as if neither a Democrat nor a Republican can be elected, and people like Mr. Hoover—that is, not positively known to be on either side—are powerful scarce."

Sir: New novels sometimes furnish refreshing views of life and thought aside from their plots. For instance, read this, from "The Man That Never Grew Up":

"A 'chick' is an untutored rural person who cannot bat 400 in Big League society. He muffs all the niceties that identify and distinguish metropolitan vogue, and may be distinguished by a bone on the base of any drawing room. He is closely related to the gentlemen who wear chin whiskers and carry wicker suit cases and blow out the gas. He is found principally upon the stage."

SENATOR REED'S BAD LUCK.

It is really too bad that someone cannot suggest something Senator Reed can do. Just at a time when his political career requires his approbation of some popular project, in order that he may not seem to be always against us, the movement sets in to make Mr. Hoover our next President. Of course, how much the Senator dislikes to disagree with us always, he cannot be for Mr. Hoover. There are probably many men in the country whom he could consistently support, but his luck is such that out of the whole number of those who might hold the office, we dig up the one man the Senator most dislikes and has most attacked. We are told that recently he happened to be one of the speakers at a dinner in the East where the Hoover boom was really launched by Mr. Barnes, the grain control man. He is out of luck. That is all there is to it.

IN WHICH BOSTON DISCOVERS THE OZARKS.

CERTAINLY there is no more delightful spot in all the vast territory of the Middle West in the United States than that embraced in what is known as the Ozark region, in Southern Missouri and Northern Arkansas. Those who have learned to know this picturesque mountainous expanse, with its hundreds of swiftly running brooks, its resplendent foliage, and its rugged hills and towering mountains, blue in the haze of incomparable summer afternoons and blue-gray twilight, are not at all hesitant in asserting that even New England can rightfully claim no superiority when the natural beauties of the Southern playgrounds are compared with the Berkshires, the White Mountains, the Green Mountains, or the vast wooded hills and dales of Maine. Any argument attempted by the Easterner who might seek to convince the partisan of the South would be futile, largely because of the still unexplored possibilities and resources, if they may be so called, of the Ozarks. Unnumbered square miles of that great territory have hardly been surveyed, and still remain quite unexplored.—Christian Science Monitor.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

RIGHTS OF RADICALS.

From the San Francisco Call and Post.
THERE is a great confusion nowadays between the small group of radicals who are trying to overthrow the Government by violence or are trying to persuade others to do so and the big group who think our present form and method of government are bad and are trying to alter them peacefully by persuading others that they are bad.

Attorney-General Palmer has complained that there are not enough laws against the dangerous sort of radicals. There are plenty. There are and always have been in this country all the laws needed to deal with people who advocate crime or are trying to be committed for private gain or for a political purpose. The country does not need any more anti-alien or anti-radical laws. It only needs an intelligent execution of the laws it has, which under Attorney-General Palmer's policy of blunder and bluster it is not getting. If the police arrested the dangerous radicals as fast as their illegal acts were committed there would be no need of spectacular raids in which at least a few innocent people as guilty as captured radicals did in their eastern raids.

There would be at least no need of arresting 10-year-old girls and subjecting them to an inquisition as to their political beliefs, as Palmer's agents did in their eastern raids. It is this sort of thing, carried to a fatuous extreme, which makes many well-behaved but ignorant aliens believe that the Government is tyrannical. The census takers have been having trouble in some of the foreign districts in the large cities, owing to this very suspicion. The foreign residents have come to think that no representative of the Government ever comes among them except to do them an injury. This does not do justice to a government which includes such men as Franklin Lane, William B. Wilson, Hiram Johnson and Justice Brandeis, as well as the Ambassadors, Mitchell Palmer and the egregious Bureaux, but the feeling exists, nevertheless.

Law-abiding radicalism is as much entitled to protection as is law-abiding Republicanism and Democracy. Members of the Socialist party and of any other law-abiding group have just as much right to be against the present administration, root, stock and branch, as Senator Lodge or Senator Johnson has.

It is time that responsible men stopped talking as though all radicalism were disreputable. Some radicalism is a good deal better than conservatism. Most of it, when law-abiding, is better than reaction. Some of it will be the orchard of the future. We might remember that the advocacy of manhood suffrage and abolitionism was once considered extremely and disreputably radical. In England in the early part of the last century the Chartists demanded reforms, many of a political nature, which have now been achieved practically in their entirety. And the Chartists were looked on by officialdom and standpatters generally as enemies of society.

If anybody has a plan to improve the United States, and will present it peaceably, he is entitled to a hearing.

ROOSEVELT AND THE SOCIALISTS.

From the Springfield Republican.
THERE is a belief that Theodore Roosevelt, one of the 52 first-year members of the Assembly, played an important part in the conference of the Socialists. It will be recalled that his famous father won the gratitude of the Socialists when he was Police Commissioner of New York City for his vigorous protection of their meetings and that he consulted with prominent Socialist party members when he was forming the original Bull Moose platform.

"But isn't it extremely painful?" "I ask you," admitted Miss Burke, "think what a relief it would be to a woman never to make up again. This is the first time it would be to appear and fair at the breakfast table, the dinner table. Now, dangerous and of things—decidedly dangerous if not used by a person. You know there are doctors and doctors who would trust to you, you would not trust, and using the electric needle, they are very particular about it. No, I should be the first to adopt a 'tooth system.' I remarked, 'Ah, but I have been made flying trips through the air, played havoc with the plexions,' replied Miss Burke. ## Science Gives Women's Faces the Eternal Bloom of Youth; Away With Powder and Rouge

The Latest Fad Is to Electrically Tattoo a Permanent
Complexion or Blush on Milady's
Sallow and Pallid Cheeks.

By Fay Stevenson.

A beauty only "skin deep?" Well, it looks as if beauty doctors and scientists were going to make it so, for in and behold, here comes a cable telling of the popularity accorded to a new fad in the English city—that of electrically tattooing a permanent complexion or blush on the face. The report goes on to say that pallid and sallow faces of London women are being permanently brightened and given a rosy tint by expert tattooists, whose electric needle applications can be made to suit any physiognomy, giving it a delicate pink, a brilliant red, or exactly the shade most needed.

"Away with your vanity boxes, mirrors, rouges and lip sticks. Milady needs them no longer. Woman has found her Fountain of Youth in her eternal bloom. What can be done in London can be done in this country."

"What do you think of this 'electrified' eternal bloom?" I asked Miss Barbara Burke, assistant editor of Beauty Culture, an A. A. of Oxford and a student of the art of electrolysis.

"I think it is perfectly ripping!" laughed Miss Burke, "and the wonder we can get such an electric tattooing treatment over here the latter."

"But isn't it extremely painful, and isn't it dangerous?" I asked.

"Most likely it would be a wee bit painful," admitted Miss Burke, "but think what a relief it would be to the average woman never to have to make up again! Think how delightful it would be to appear as fresh and fair at the breakfast table as at the dinner table. Now, as to the dangerous end of things—it would be decidedly dangerous if not done by a proper person. You know yourself there are doctors and doctors, some doctors you would trust and others you would not trust, and so it is with using the electric needle. In London they are very particular about the art of electrolysis. No one is allowed to use the needle who has not studied at least three years and taken a regular course. If we are particular here in New York there will be no danger. I should like to have the perpetual bloom myself!"

"It seems strange that the London women who have always been noted for their splendid complexions should be the first to adopt this tattooing system," I remarked.

"Ah, but I have been told by American beauty doctors who have made flying trips there that the war has played havoc with their complexions," replied Miss Burke. "Thousands of women who are unaccustomed to daily toil were engaged to work of national importance during the war, and the close atmosphere of office or workshop has taken the bloom from their cheeks and rendered rosy complexions pallid and sallow. They have face creams and rouge sticks, lip salve and powder have done something to effect a transformation, but these methods involve constant attention and care, as well as frequent renewal."

"Ladies of all classes have flocked to the tattoo doctor to have the tint of a blush rose permanently stamped on their features by means of rosate pigments worked in by the electric needle. Such an outfit comprises an electric tattooing needle operated from a battery and supplied with current through a flexible wire, says the Electrical Experimenter for December, while a small rubber tube leads through the needle proper to whichever complexion is selected by the customer."

"A leading London follower of the art said his practice had developed to a remarkable extent of late," continued Miss Burke. "All sorts of women come to my studio to have permanent complexion tattooed on their faces," he said. "The majority of them are what you might call society women. When the electric needle has done its work they never look tired or wan; they get up in the morning looking fresh as flowers. Many of them improve the color of their lips by having them tattooed a brilliant red."

"But even a tattooed face can grow wrinkled," said I, feeling a perfect joy-kill and the assassin of woman's perpetual youth.

"Only today we received a Paris cable telling there that the war has played havoc with their complexions," replied Miss Burke. "Thousands of women who are unaccustomed to daily toil were engaged to work of national importance during the war, and the close atmosphere of office or workshop has taken the bloom from their cheeks and rendered rosy complexions pallid and sallow. They have face creams and rouge sticks, lip salve and powder have done something to effect a transformation, but these methods involve constant attention and care, as well as frequent renewal."

Three Charming Fashions Direct From France

Sketched in Paris for the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Jan. 9.—Emerald green velvet, oriental metal tissue and taupe fox, all lend their charms to make this evening wrap the lovely thing it is.

Although much amused, French women visiting the fashion section of the "Salon d'Automne" were very enthusiastic over this comfy rest suit. It is of the new animal skin material—a kind of pale yellow velvet, which is either spotted or striped.

An exquisite frock of white tulle, silver tissue and silver lace, was shown by Georgette at the exposition of dress given at the "Salon."

The Real Prince and the Real Princess—Part II.

PRINCE OTTO, dressed as a servant, rode close behind the pretending Prince and when he saw Ritta he wondered after all if he had not made a mistake in changing places with his servant, but as his eyes ran along the line of attendants he saw the beautiful Aneta and right then and there he made up his mind that none other should be his Princess.

The Queen was overjoyed with her scheme, for the pretending Prince had glances for none but Ritta and while the King was getting uneasy because he did not notice his daughter, the Queen told him how fortunate it was that the Princess had escaped marrying a Prince who would not love her.

Princess Aneta and the Prince lost no time in finding out that they loved each other and when the Prince told her she was beautiful enough to be a Queen he learned for the first time who she really was.

"I do not wish to be a Queen," replied the Princess, "although a Princess is brought up to expect to be one some day, and I may have to be one, but I should choose to be something different."

"But you are not a Princess," said the Prince, "though you are beautiful enough to be one. Be my wife and let us be married at the same time the Prince and Princess Aneta are married, for of course that is why he came to ask the King for her hand."

The Queen sent for her daughter and when she found that Ritta loved the handsome servant of the Prince she could say no more and so that night Prince Otto and Princess Aneta were married and Ritta and the Duke.

"Where is the King's daughter?" Why has she not been presented to the Prince?"

"I do not know why the Queen does not wish to meet the Prince. But of course you know that I am Princess Aneta," replied the Princess.

Prince Otto took her in his arms and kissed her before he replied, and then he began to laugh.

"This is a good joke on the Queen," he said, "for I am sure I see through it all now."

"The Queen wished her daughter to marry the Prince and she made you dress in the clothes of an attendant, but my dear Princess, you have won the heart of Prince Otto and no one else will be married, for I am the Prince and the other man is one of my servants. I wished to be loved for myself alone and not for my title and wealth."

Maxims of a Modern Maid

By Marguerite
Moore
Marshall

IN the laboratory of Love each experiment passes through three stages—action, satisfaction, reaction.

A Kentucky Kuke is perturbed by "progressive polyandry," but surely it is more moral—not to say legal—than polyandry of the contemporary sort.

If you wonder why men marry widows, "ask the man who owns one"—he knows about it all, he knows, he KNOWS.

The young dog who has just caught a chicken is like the young man who has done "ditto"; each is foolish enough to expect admiration for his feat. Marriage would be so simple if it were merely a matter of loving one's husband, but—alas!—it's also a matter of keeping him fed.

"A new star has been found, and a woman found it!" I boasted. "Probably a masculine star," jeered the Jealous Male.

Is it a mere coincidence, I wonder, that "dry" rhymes with "lie," with "why" and also with "die?" To the rounder, woman is fair game—and no game is injured by being a little high.

After an alleged "perennial engagement" of eight years a young woman is asking a quarter of a million in damages. Money cannot—and does not—compensate the average female victim of a long engagement.

The fourth and sixth sons of the former Kaiser are seeking divorces. For royal private life has, it seems, its compensations!

The saddest words of tongue or pen are these: "The fool has married AGAIN!"

trick?" she said to the Prince.

"How dared you, Madam, keep the real Princess in the background while you pretended your daughter was a Princess?" said the Prince.

"Your scheme did not work, for the Princess and I should have married at the same time the Prince and Princess Aneta are married, for of course that is why he came to ask the King for her hand."

The Queen sent for her daughter and when she found that Ritta loved the handsome servant of the Prince she could say no more and so that night Prince Otto and Princess Aneta were married and Ritta and the Duke.

MARKING CLOTHING.

WHEN the ironing day comes to a household and the clothes are folded and laid each in its own pile to be taken to its proper destination, who has not known the elusiveness of a mark? The name should be on, but where? You turn the article around several times before finally you distinguish the mark that decides where the garment is to be put away. It may surprise some people who give such things little thought, to learn that there is a recognized place for a mark or a name. This is what is necessary in standardizing work, and the reason for this is the same as the reason for many other things, it saves time and labor.

A garment should be marked when it is made, with the name of the wearer, or if it is a household article such as a towel, pillow case, table cloth or serviette.

Then the wisest course is to print or write the name of the family plainly in marking ink in the correct place.

This prevents loss in the laundry and saves time in handling. We give a list of rules in marking which is accepted as correct.

Towels—wrong side—end opposite the monogram.

Hose—wrong side—at the top near the seam.

Tablecloth—wrong side—near the end of the hem, any corner.

Serviettes—wrong side—near the end of the hem, any corner.

Sheets—wrong side—near the end of the small hem.

Pillow slips—wrong side—near the opening—close to the seam.

Blankets—wrong side—near a corner.

Bedsprad—wrong side—near a corner.

Handkerchiefs—a corner, on or near the hem.

Coats—inside—center of the back of the neck.

Combinations—inside—center of the back of the neck.

Dresses—inside—on button side at the waist.

Skirts—inside—near the button on the band.

Aprons—inside—on the button side near the end of the band.

Shiftwaists—inside—below the last button.

Corset-covers—inside—below the last button, or on bottom of center front if the waist slips over the head.

Drawers—inside—near button.

Chemise—inside—under left arm.

Night-dress—inside—under the left arm hole.

Vests—inside—middle of the back of the neck.

Collars—inside—middle of the back near the buttonhole.

Cuffs—inside—end near the tab.

To Iron Collar Bands

MANY are troubled about getting a collar button in the collar band after it has been washed and ironed.

Just before you iron the collar band, put a piece of paper folded together two or three times right in the opening where you put the button up under, then iron thoroughly dry; let stand, then remove the paper. You will find the opening free to put the button in.

After you have ironed the collar band on a shirt, try a pincher clothes pin to hold the band in shape instead of a button; it's much quicker and answers the purpose.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING INSTALLMENT.

Philip Maxwell finds his guest, known as Vincent Lee, who is a man who captures the man who killed him. He learns that the dead man, Maurice Dubois, and that his right name was Maurice Dubois. Maxwell also learns that his wife, from whom he was separated, is alive and well. He shows the man who killed Dubois to go free.

"I HOPED that it was you," she said with a sigh. "You look as though you were brave enough, and no man had a better right."

"How do you know that?" he asked.

"I am going to tell you," she said. "It was kind of you to come here, and you are going to be rewarded. Wait here for a moment."

Maxwell was puzzled. She disappeared into the inner room. In about five minutes she came back with a little packet of letters in her hand.

"Mr. Maxwell, you did not mean that she was dead, did you?" He looked away, and his voice was scarcely natural.

"No."

"I had to ask you! Don't mind! Read those letters."

"One by one Maxwell read them, and piece by piece the evil plot of the dead man, against the woman who had despised him, became revealed. Then he gave a sharp little cry. He had reached the last letter, and it bore a date which he remembered.

"You say that you have compromised me, that my husband is already estranged, and you dare to offer me your love as a refuge. You do not know the woman who has despised him, become revealed. Then he gave a sharp little cry. He had reached the last letter, and it bore a date which he remembered.

"The man was torn off, but it was sufficient! The letter fluttered from Maxwell's fingers. She had come to him, and he had declined to listen to her. She had written letters to him, and he had declined to read them. He had been a harsh, short-sighted fool—the victim of an evil plot, and she—his wife was guiltless! Oh, what folly! What folly!"

He looked up and became conscious of the woman who sat watching him.

"Where did you get those letters?" he asked.

"It was five years ago," she said. "I found them in his room and I hid them. I hated him, and I knew from his anger when he discovered their loss that they were very important. He had every carpet up, every drawer ransacked, every corner turned out. But I held them safely. If they were as precious to him as all that, I knew that they must be part and parcel of one of his villainous schemes. When he was gone I read them. I understood now that they were a record of one of his failures. You believed your wife guilty, Mr. Maxwell?"

"I did," he groaned. "It was a poor miserable fool!"

"Well, you had better set to work and try and find her. She will forgive you! Women always forgive, and she must be—a very good woman."

He looked up at her with a sudden sense of gratitude.

"How can I ever repay you?" he cried, warmly.

"Some day," she answered. "I may be starving. It is very possible if it comes to that I will write and ask you for money. Good-bye; I hope that you will find her."

And that was the prayer on Maxwell's lips when he left England a few hours later.

CHAPTER IV.

"WOMEN," her friend was saying, "forgive too easily. A man is always sure of them. It is a great mistake."

"Do you think so?" Maud Maxwell answered softly.

"I am sure of it. Give me another cigarette, please. I wish the echoes from those wretched guns would not roll amongst the hills so. I can stand the noise, but I don't like it secondhand. What a crash!"

The girls both stood up and looked across the valley to the hill beyond. Little puffs of white smoke had suddenly shot out from a dozen places around its base, and the roar of answering guns from beneath shot the still morning air, and sent it vibrating about them. The two girls drew close together. This was war in earnest then. The older one looked across at the tent a few yards away.

"There will be work for us before long," she said. "You will not be nervous, Maud?"

Her companion smiled sadly. "There is no fear of that," she said. "This is not nearly so terrible as the accident ward in a great hospital. I have seen some dreadful sights there—and then war is different. Out here men are fighting for a great cause—they go into battle knowing their risk. It is the suddenness of an accident which is so awful. No, I shall be ready for work when it comes."

"There will be nothing to do for some time, at any rate," her friend remarked. "Let us forget that we are waiting for dying men, and talk about the living."

"I would rather talk about anything else," Maud said sadly. "Men do not interest me."

"Yet you wear," her companion remarked, with a sidelong glance at the white, slim fingers clasped now around her knee, "a wedding ring!"

Maud smiled bitterly.

"Every night," she said, "for five years I have meant to take it off, but when the time comes I lack the courage. It is foolish to keep it on for my husband and I are parted forever. Yet—it remains there you see. I begin to think now that it will stay there as long as I live."

"Poor little woman," her friend said, smiling. "However, you are wise in your generation. Take my advice, Maud, and never part with it."

The two girls both started round at the thunder of horses' hoofs close behind them. A single rider, galloping up the steep hillside. As he reached the summit he leaped from his horse, which was covered with foam and quite exhausted, and stepped eagerly forward to the edge of the precipice. Down below in the valley were dark masses of men steadily moving towards one another, from the hills around the plain came little puffs of white smoke and flashes of fire. It was a picture of a battle scene, a chosen battlefield from a distance, a point of view. But the newcomer was evidently no ordinary spectator. He whipped out a notebook from his pocket and began to sketch. He had not even glanced towards the two women.

"He is a newspaper correspondent," the older woman whispered. "How interesting. Let us go and peep. He is too absorbed to notice us."

Maud did not answer. She was standing with her eyes fixed upon the man whose tall, slim figure was silhouetted so distinctly against the background of empty air. Her lips moved, but she did not speak. Her companion, glancing carelessly around, was amazed at her expression.

"Why, Maud, are you ill?" she cried. "You look as though you had seen a ghost."

There was a dead silence for several moments. The women were looking at one another. The man who had not glanced at either of them, was sketching as though his very life depended upon the swift completion of his work. Then Maud's white lips moved in a half whisper.

"I have seen a ghost," she said. "Come with me into the tent."

Fulton's Left Jab Stops Cowler in The Third Round

Plaster Floors Tom Twice in First and Bell Saves Loser in the Second.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 22.—Fred Fulton last night won a technical knockout over Tom Cowler in the windup at the Olympia A. A. Referee Grimsom stopped the unequal bout in the third round, when Cowler was unable to defend himself.

Cowler was on the floor when the bell rang ending the second round. The minute's rest did him little good; in fact, he came out of his chair reeling and groggy. He was a target for Fulton's snappy left. He was sent to the floor with a left hook on the jaw and took a count of eight. Fulton made another lunge and Cowler was driven to the ropes. He slipped to his knees through sheer weakness. As he arose, Fulton stabbed him with his left and another hook to the jaw and Cowler fell into a clinch. Then the referee intervened.

Cowler had been sent to the floor twice in the first round and was given a liberal count of nine each time. He was outboxed and outfought in that session.

In the second round Cowler made a phony effort to fight back, and caught Fulton once on the jaw. The blow seemed to awaken the Western heavyweight and he cut loose with his left, sending it to body and face. A double blow sent Cowler to the floor eight seconds before the round ended. He was sitting on his haunches with his arm grabbing the ropes when the bell sounded, ending the session.

The bout was Fulton's first appearance here. Cowler had taken part in several mediocre bouts in Philadelphia rings last season.

Fulton started the contest with a damaged right hand. It had not thoroughly healed from its contact recently with Moran's head. He picked out the soft spots on Cowler's body for his right and did all the execution with his left. That was sufficient to win. Fulton practically stopped Cowler with his left hand.

MCKEESPORT SILENT AS TO CUP TIE GAME TERMS

Because no word has been received in answer to a letter from Pete Radican, asking what terms would be offered to switch the game to Pittsburgh or McKeesport, Pa., officials of the St. Louis Soccer League last night were unable to make any definite arrangements for the fourth round U. S. F. A. cup game between the Cardinals and McKeesport National Tube eleven.

Radican stated that if he received no word from the McKeesport management by Saturday morning he would wire or phone, so that a meeting could be held for Sunday's contest at Cardinal Field.

SCOUT WINS CONTRACT SUIT AGAINST PHILS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 22.—William T. Doyle, Portsmouth, O., former baseball scout, won an $850 verdict against the Philadelphia National League baseball club in Common Pleas court here yesterday. Doyle sued for back salary and interest alleged to be due him on a contract with the Phillies, which was canceled by the club when the national "work-or-fight" order went into effect in August, 1918. Doyle is now with the Milwaukee club.

The suit was regarded as important in sporting circles as it was the first test in this section of the "work-or-fight" order as applied to baseball contracts.

BOXING SCHOOL FORMED BY GIBBONS BROTHERS

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 22.—Mike Gibbons, the middleweight, and his brother, Tommy, yesterday incorporated the Gibbons Athletic Association with $50,000 capital stock. Two conduct a boxing, athletic training and physical culture school. While Mike announced his retirement after a recent defeat by Mike O'Dowd, middleweight champion, Tommy is still in active training.

Overlin Stops Ashlock

K. O. Overlin stopped Kid Ashlock in five rounds in the feature bout of the boxing show staged at the Tota A. C. formerly the Shaw A. C. Overlin stopped his rival with a left uppercut and right cross. Spook Egler won from Cyrene Kishi in the semiswindup, while Kid Lario outpointed Battling Bitancin in the curtain raiser. Kid Parker refereed.

A Chilly Aftermath—

"You're the second sick-a-bed I've seen today," exclaimed Anne as she breezed into Tom Tollinger's room, carrying a box of medicine. "I just came from Mary Barnes' and she has the grippe."

"Two gripes?" asked Tom, looking at the box. "I've never seen a grippe so terrible and so wonderful. When I was found the gasoline tank was empty and we were stranded on the way home. I thought it was a joke at first. But will you ever forget how cold we were after that hour and a half wait?"

"Never," Anne said with a shiver. "And I don't see how Bob and Charlie ever walked two miles home without gasoline. I would have frozen on the way. I know. As it is they have the grippe."

"What lucky! Just sensible," Anne said teasingly. "Whenever you get sick, you certainly are lucky."

Martin and Carpenter Were Matched Before Dempsey Won Title, Bronson Says

Manager of Inter-Allied Champion, Replying to Jack Kearns, Intimates Bob Has Prior Right to Bout With Frenchman—Propaganda Reflecting on Dempsey Explained.

By John E. Wray.

THE Jack Dempsey-Bob Martin controversy entered the second phase, yesterday, with a counter attack on the Dempsey camp, James Bronson of Joplin manager of inter-allied Champion Bob Martin heading the charge.

Replying to Kearns' salvo of Tuesday, warning Martin's advisers that continuance of the distribution of propaganda belittling Jack Dempsey's war record would be followed by legal proceedings, Bronson yesterday sent back the following retort:

"Kearns is running in circles. The letter to which he refers was only a part of the resolution adopted by the Pueblo, Colo. Post of the American Legion and an announcement of a bona fide fight I have received from promoters to stage a fight between Martin and Carpenter."

"Kearns' telegram, as reported in press dispatches, evidently takes more exception to the resolution than to any word or act of either mine or Martin's. Those resolutions were passed without my knowledge or advice. The first word I received from there was the offer of $75,000 purse for Martin's service in a bout with Carpenter and a copy of the resolutions was attached."

"As a matter of fact, Martin was matched with Carpenter before Dempsey won the championship. Martin, the American representative at the Inter-Allied Games, through the system of drawing used, was to have met the French soldier-champion, who was representing France at the soldier Olympic. A few days before the bout was scheduled to take place it was announced that Carpenter had injured his hand, so Joplin, a stablemate of Carpenter, was substituted and with DeCamp in his corner, Martin knocked him out in three rounds."

"As for Kearns' charges that I have attempted to use my influence with the American Legion or traded on my own achievements in France they are absolutely without foundation. I have never attempted to 'boost' Martin's stock with former soldiers in any way. I know him and his record and have followed his every fight and the accounts taken by dozens of Legion posts came to us as a big surprise as it did to Kearns."

"Fame Has Its Drawbacks."

DEMPSEY'S position in the discussion is ably stated by George Daley, the fairest of New York sportswriters, who thus analyzes the unfortunate affair:

No brief is being written for Dempsey on his war record. He, a fighting man, did not rush to enlist; but his name was in the draft and, no doubt, he would have gone willingly enough with those who were made much of in baseball and boxing. And consequently, the crusade against him amounts in a way to discrimination. As a heavyweight boxing champion of the world he is held up to public contempt; as a shoe-maker he would have escaped notice. Fame has its drawbacks."

Carpenter to Visit U. S.

Negotiations with Dempsey will probably come to a head next month, with the expected arrival in this country of Carpenter, who is coming to fight some sort of amateur exhibition contract, the terms of which have not been divulged. It is possible that several innocuous "fights" may be arranged for Carpenter, if the Dempsey affair hangs fire.

It is certain, however, that nothing will be done with reference to abandoning the title event in this country until the situation here has been thoroughly sounded and the opponent tested. That $550,000 offer of Fox will not lightly be passed by.

WILLIAMS SIGNS 3-YEAR CONTRACT AT MINNESOTA

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 22.—Dr. H. L. Williams, football coach of the University of Minnesota for the past 20 years, was placed under contract for three more years in an agreement reached by the Athletic Board of Control late yesterday.

Sharkey Shades White.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 22.—Jack Sharkey of New York won a newspaper decision over James White of Albany here last night. Sharkey exhibited superior speed, landing volleys of blows to his opponent's head and body. White, however, mixed it gamely throughout the 10 rounds.

Kemper Military Wins.

BOONVILLE, Mo., Jan. 22.—In the initial conference game of the season the Kemper Military School Quintet defeated the basketball team of the Calicothe Business College, last night, 28 to 22. The score was tied at three and of the first half and at three different times during the final period.

Battling Box Mexican Kid.

Battling Ball, St. Louis, colored lightweight who last week fought Leo Patterson 10 rounds to a draw in Cincinnati, will box Mexican Kid at the new St. Louis Boxing Club tomorrow night. The club's hall is at Twenty-first and Olive streets.

Wallace Is After Bout.

Jimmy Wallace, who has met many good boys in the 125-pound class, and who was defeated by Johnny Collins at the Coliseum some time ago, is after bouts with local boys.

Billikens' Basket Captain Injured In Practice Tilt

Diethelm, Star Forward of St. Louis U. Five, Will Be Out of Game for 3 Weeks.

A stiff scrimmage session, yesterday, resulted in the loss to the St. Louis University basketball squad of Capt. Diethelm, star forward. Diethelm will be out of the game for about three weeks, according to Coach Fisher, crippling the squad for its trip to Northern Indiana and Illinois. The first series will be played without the leader, tomorrow and Saturday nights when the Billikens meet the Cape Girardeau Normals on the teachers' court.

Diethelm's place will be taken by Rutchford or Lamb. Both men will be given opportunities to show in the Normal series.

The squad will depart for Cape Girardeau tomorrow morning. Coach Fisher will take nine men with him.

Haskell May Play Here.

Offers for football games keep coming to Father Hermans, director of athletics at the Grand avenue institution. The Haskell Indians are eager to play here on Oct. 30. Inasmuch as Rolla applied for that date at an earlier time, there are now three applicants for the contest.

As it is thought the Indians would prove the best drawing attraction, the Billiken authorities are inclined to believe that Haskell will be scheduled. The Redskins have not played in this city since they met Christian Brothers' College five years ago.

There will be no basket ball practice at Francis Gymnasium today. Scrimmage was held yesterday and a light workout is booked for 2 p. m. tomorrow. Saturday's practice will be confined to the game against the alumni team in the evening.

Captain Rutherford is allowing his men to take things easy this week, because of the examinations which start out on the hill-top today.

Morris Jacks has been elected captain of the Parkway track and field squad and assembled his teammates yesterday at the Grand avenue school. Jacks is a half-miler and has represented the local school at the Valley games the past two years. He is a senior in the school of engineering.

SEVEN AMATEUR BOUTS WILL BE DECIDED AT STAG A. C. TONIGHT

Seven amateur boxing bouts are on the program of the show to be staged tonight at the Stag A. C. The first contest will be between Mike O'Donnell of the Stag A. C. and Sam Morris, Southern A. C. claimants to the city 155-pound championship. Mike Kramer and Dave Kram will be booked to battle in another star bout. The complete schedule:

Carl Nelson, Stag A. C., vs. Joe Klein, Southern A. C., 110 pounds. Joe Baubeck, Stag A. C., vs. Charles Baugh, Wagner, 125 pounds. W. Zunt, S. B. A. C., vs. Red Whalen, Senate A. C., 115 pounds. Gus Block, Stag A. C., vs. Soldier Dixon, Southern A. C., 125 pounds. Mike Kramer, Southern A. C., vs. Dave Kram, unattached, 110 pounds. Elmer Hemminger, Stag A. C., vs. Robert Weiss, S. B. A. C., 115 pounds. Mike O'Donnell, Stag A. C., vs. Sam Morris, Southern A. C., 135 pounds. Eddie Randall will referee all the bouts, while Judge Robert W. Hall and Judge Zachary W. Taylor will act as judges.

PITCHER WEILMAN TO GO SOUTH WITH BURKE

Carl Weilman, southpaw who turned a sensational comeback last season, will be in the Browns' party that departs for Taylor, Tex., for spring training next month. Weilman, in the latter of his last season, weighs 197 pounds, and is already taking light training. Weilman last summer was forced to quit the club because of an injury.

Nevada Beats Stanford.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Jan. 22.—The University of Nevada basketball ball five defeated the Stanford team here last night, 28 to 19.

Bechtold Seriously Ill.

Charles Bechtold, star forward of the St. Louis Screw Co. soccer team, is seriously ill at his home with double pneumonia. Bechtold has not been well for some time and played against the Robins Dry Dock team against the advice of several medical trainers. He has been out of the Screw Co. lineup since that time.

Relative Values.
A PAIR of trousers will nick your roll
For nearly the price of a ton of coal.

And a ton of coal we have seen advance

Till it costs as much as a pair of pants.

And a pair of pants to protect your legs

Will cost as much as a dozen eggs.

And a dozen eggs as they now are sold

Are well worth double their weight in gold.

It's got to be that a pint of booze

Costs nearly as much as a pair of shoes.

For a pair of shoes a guy now blows

What he used to pay for a suit of clothes.

And a suit of clothes will set you back

What you used to pay for a sealskin sack.

And a sealskin sack of the latest mode

Now costs as much as a swell abode.

And a swell abode now comes as high

As a golden mansion in the sky.

The only thing that's been known to shrink

Is the purchasing power of our chink.

The price of clothing and food and rents

Makes a dollar bill look like 30 cents.

We miss our hops and snops, but we still have our Rickey.

Quite so, But Rickey is not a Branch of the Well-known Gin.

We have a speaking acquaintance with hops, but have never been introduced to "snops."

Jack Kearns says if Jimmy Bronson doesn't stop picking on Jack Dempsey he'll fight him in court to a decision.

If Jimmy's alleged propaganda should keep Jack out of that $550,000 match with Carpenter why leave the decision to a referee in bankruptcy.

STUNG!

We had intended saying something about the person who purchased the Omaha Bee getting stung, but we put it off so long that one of our contemporaries beat us to it. So we have decided to say nothing about it.

Goessling to Little Rock.

Edward Goessling, Municipal League pitcher, has been signed by the Little Rock club of the Southern League. Goessling last season pitched a no-hit no-run game.

THE MAGIC CLOCK.
Sometimes when Bill gets out of bed
On winter mornings, he complains
Of buzzing noises in his head.
And various sorts of aches and pains.
There's something in the way he looks
That fills his mother with dismay.
And so she says, "Don't get your books
You mustn't go to school today."

He doesn't look so very ill.
And yet he has no appetite
And always we're alarmed when Bill
Don't years for food, by day or night.
He sits, all huddled in a chair
And sort of seems to droop and pine.
A little picture of despair
Until he hears the clock strike nine.

The magic clock; the magic hour!
When little children are distressed,
Combined they wield a healing power
No doctor ever has possessed!
The dreaded bell has pealed its last
The drooping child is well assured
That school-time now is safely passed
And lo! He suddenly is cured!

He hurries to the pantry shelf
His face with wakening health aglow,
The breakfast he denied himself
Is put where breakfasts ought to go.
And though such craft in one so small
His prudent mother must deplore,
She's rather thankful, after all,
For she's not worried any more!

Clothes and Coffee.

While in the army I was accompanied by a Sergeant who, to hear him talk, was one of the brainiest men Uncle Sam had hired. On pass one Sunday, in a certain town, a young woman we met on the street asked us if we cared to go to her house and have a cup of coffee. On arriving we were introduced to her mother, who made excuses in regard to her appearance. She remarked:
"I'll go and put on the percolator."
The Sergeant said: "Oh, you look all right the way you are."—Chicago

Something to Hold Him.

They were very fond of each other and had been engaged; but they had quarreled and were too proud to make it up. He called afterward at her house—to see her father on business. She was at the door.
"Ah—Miss Blank, I believe?" said
he. "Is your father in?"
"No, sir," she replied, "father is not at present. Do you wish to see him personally?"
"Yes," was the bluff response of the visitor, who felt that his former sweetheart was yielding. "I wanted to see him on very particular business"—and he turned away haughtily.

"I beg your pardon," she called after him as he reached the last step, "but who shall I say called?"

The most exacting analysis of St. Louis Dairy Company's milk, will show only the pure milk with an unusual percentage of vitality and tissue-building qualities.

That's why, for fifty-one years, we have been able to number many thousands of St. Louis families as our customers year after year.

This unquestioned ability to furnish our patrons with the best dairy product obtainable is the result of our careful sanitary supervision from the dairy to the table.

Drink more milk. Children as well as grown folks thrive on the wholesome goodness of St. Louis Dairy Company's milk because it builds up healthy manhood and womanhood.
